Burton Nominated for Supreme Court, Patterson as Head of War Department

Labor Dept. Given Funds And Powers Of 3 Agencies

Secretary Going To Strike Center; Davis Out as OES Passes to OWMR

Armed with a Presidential grant of the Government's major labor agencies and powers, Secretary of Labor Schwellenbach will move today into Detroit's boiling industrial disputes and begin the first steps of conciliation.

Schwellenbach's promise to act at once on the current strike, strike threats and union wage demands in the auto center followed a White House conference yesterday afternoon during which Mr. Truman announced that he had transferred to the Labor Department oll of the functions, powers and appropriations of the War Labor Board, the War Manpower Commission and the United States Employment Service.

Entirely in His Hands

The President said that future Government moves in Detroit were entirely in the hands of the new Secretary, that he would take what action was necessary and permissable under law.

At his own press conference immediately afterwards, Schwellenbach disclosed that he would act through the department's conciliation service, which he intends to rebuild to a position of authority after four years during which it was little more than an agency certifying disputes to the War Labor Board.

He announced the appointment of Edgar L. Warren, formerly director of Conciliation, and said that Warren would arrive here today and determine whether to proceed at once to Detroit.

Besides announcing the consolidation of the WLB, WMC and USES in the Labor Department, and promising eventually to give it all labor machinery within the entire Government, President Truman shifted the Office of Economic Stabilization to the Office of War Mobilization and Reconversion, headed by John W. Snyder. Mr. Truman made it clear that the present director of OES, William H. Davis, would no longer head this key agency determining reconversion wage and price policy.

Asked what would happen to Davis, the President smiled and said that with the transfer Davis would not have anything to do and that Snyder would do what there was.

Asked about Davis' statement of 10 days ago that it was the Administration policy to raise wages 50

Father Sees Baby Crushed to Death Beneath Truck

Sixteenth-month-old Christine Veronica Dailey was crushed to death at 1 p. m. yesterday under a 1½-ton truck before the horrified eyes of her father, Joseph Dennis Dailey, a farmer, in front of her home on Livingston rd., Meadow View, Md.

The driver of the truck, Donald Bower, a next door neighbor, was not aware of the accident until he returned home last night about 5 p. m. from work. Neighbors told him about the child's death. He called Prince Georges County police at once, but Identification Officer John Siddall and County Policeman C. L. Perrygo already had decided against police action.

The father had walked into the road to talk to his neighbor and was holding a still younger child in his arms. The two talked for about 10 minutes but did not notice that the child had toddled from the house and under the truck. When Bower started, the transmission housing crushed the child's head.

The father frantically hailed a passing Army staff car and the child was hurried to Bolling Field Hospital where she was pronounced dead by Army personnel.

Auto Workers Seek Interim Wage Increase

Might Avert Strikes During Negotiations, CIO Spokesman Says

Detroit, Sept. 18 (AP).—Officials of the United Automobile Workers (CIO) asserted tonight that the union plans to proceed with its demand for a 30 per cent general wage increase in the Nation's automobile industry, but that it would not refuse temporary increases at this time.

One union spokesman said temporary increases might provide a means of averting strikes in plants of major production. He pointed out that negotiation of an industry 30 per cent increase probably would require months of conferences.

The union executives hastened to add, however, that temporary increases could be accepted by local uions only so long as they left the way open for an ultimate general increase that would total 30 per cent. They emphasized that there had been no offer to the industry in connection with stop-gap increases and that they had mentioned no specific minimum as an acceptable temporary increase at this time.

Walter P. Reuther, UAW-CIO vice president, said in a press conference last week that if any company were to grant a 10 per cent increase now and later agreed to the full 30 per cent raise, the union would expect the additional 20 per cent to be made retroactive to the effective date of the initial increase.

With no new work stoppages reported in the Detroit area, those idled by strikes and shut-downs remained at approximately 82,000, including the 50,000 workers sent home last week by the Ford Motor Co. when it closed its production lines because of labor difficulties among its supplying firms.

Bans Lifted On Building Despite OPA

Snyder Sets Oct. 15 For End of Control; Price Chief Sees Great Price Boom

By Christine Sadler

Reconversion Director John W. Snyder yesterday ordered all limits on new construction ended October 15, overriding OPA objections that lifting controls while building materials are scarce will result in a skyrocketing of prices and clear the way for a building boom that is sure to collapse.

The pricing agency can put ceilings on materials which go into a house and also can set a limit on contractors' fees, but Congress has consistently refused it authority to set the sale value of a house or any other real estate.

Bowles Objects

Price Administrator Chester Bowles told the Senate Small Business Committee at a morning hearing cut short by Snyder's announcement that OPA would tighten up its ceilings on housing components and contractural services—but expressed belief that only farmers building on their own land would now be fully protected.

"If you let this thing go, you are going to have the greatest boom in prices this country has ever seen," he declared. "We will do what we can, but we will be controlling only about 75 per cent of the way."

Senator Kenneth Wherry (R., Nebr.) declared: "What you will be doing will be squeezing the little fellow who supplies the materials and letting the speculator go free. I think all price controls should be lifted and water be permitted to find its own level."

Snyder declared a rapid expansion of the construction industry "can be the greatest single additional source of jobs in our entire economy. This was what was in the minds of all of us when it was agreed that L-41 should be lifted."

Outlines Steps

Under a program for expanding the industry, he said the following steps will be taken:

1. An active campaign to increase the supply of scarce building materials, and "if necessary price and wage increases and priorities to break bottlenecks will be granted."

2. WPB will strengthen inventory controls to prevent hoarding of building materials.

3. OPA will strengthen price control on building materials "to counteract inflationary pressure."

4. Federal credit agencies will "do everything possible to discourage excessive and unsound lending on mortgages. "They will enlist voluntary cooperation of banks and other lending institutions to minimize the danger of inflated prices due to excessive demand."

5. Representative of building groups, including real estate building supplies and construction will be called to Washington to "map out a voluntary program to increase quickly the production of all ma-

U. S. Sets Up Reserve of Trucks To Be Sold Only to Veterans

By Sam Stavisky
Post Veterans Editor

A plan to break up the log jam that prevents veterans from buying surplus trucks was announced yesterday by Commerce Department.

Under the new program, reserves of trucks and other surplus commodities will be set aside especially for veterans.

Veterans have a Congress-granted preference in buying surplus war goods, but as revealed last week in The Post, less than 100 veterans have been able to use the privilege because of friction between governmental agencies dealing with surplus.

The veterans' purchase preference is exercised through Smaller War Plants Corp. The sale of surplus motor vehicles, which the veterans want most of all, is managed by Commerce Department's Office of Surplus Property. The two agencies have been at odds with each other for two and one-half months over implementing veterans' preference, with the result that most veterans haven't been getting any.

William S. Bradley, director of surplus activities for Commerce, declared in announcing the plan:

"Within the next 10 days a sufficient quantity of trucks will be set aside for the Smaller War Plants Corp. to satisfy the requests from veterans that have so far been received."

At SWPC it was estimated that some 30,000 veterans over the Nation have already filed applications for motor vehicles, mainly trucks, jeeps and automobiles. Bradley has previously disclosed that 69,000 trucks have been released to Commerce by the Army in the last month and a half.

Draft Policy May Defer 97% In High School

Selective Service last night announced a new deferment policy for 'teen-age youths which will permit an estimated 97 per cent of all high school students to graduate before they are called for induction.

At the same time, it announced regulations which will permit any college student who enrolled before he was 18 to finish his current quarter or semester unless he ceases to pursue his studies continuously and satisfactorily.

Likewise, any high school student who enrolled before he was 18, may be deferred until graduation or until he reaches the age of 20, whichever is earlier. Deferment will be withdrawn, however, if he leaves school or fails to make satisfactory progress in his studies.

The new regulations answer one of the most persistent congressional arguments for ending the draft. Many members complained

Russia Seeks Voice in Two Italian Areas

Molotov Discloses Views on Colonies At Big 5 Conference

London, Sept. 18 (AP).—Russia openly expressed interest today in what happens to Italy's colonies and indicated she might ask a share in administering at least two of them.

"I will not conceal Soviet interest in Eritrea," Soviet Foreign Commissar V. M. Molotov told a news conference, adding that there was "a grain of truth" in a report that the Soviet Union was seeking some sort of control of Tripolitania.

Molotov made the disclosures after he and the Foreign Ministers of the United States, Britain, France and China heard Yugoslavia's Vice Premier, Edward Kardelj, ask on behalf of his country for a large share of Italian territory.

Heard Italian Claim

Following Kardelj, the Italian Foreign Minister, Count Alcide de Gasperi, presented the proposals of his government on the boundary adjustment. Tonight the Big Five council held its first evening session in order to hear the views of the representatives of the British dominions.

While declining to commit himself in detail on the Italo-Yugoslav boundary dispute, Molotov made it clear that Russia would Ashminoyu Village, Japan, Sept. 16 (U.P.).—Rumors that Adolf Hitler escaped to Japan by submarine are so rife in Tokyo that United States Army sleuths are giving a close onceover to the 3000-od Gerans foregathered in protective isolation in this remote mountain district, on the chance that the former fuehrer may be hidden in their midst behind a clok of anonymity.

Senate Opens Drive to End USES Setup

Returns to States Proposed by Lucas; Truman Requested Controls Remain

By Robert C. Albright

President Truman last night faced Senate reversal on two points in his reconversion program, as a drive opened to return United State Employment Service offices to the 48 States.

The move was surprisingly sponsored by Senator Scott W. Lucas (D., Ill.), usually an Administration stalwart, as an amendment to the battered jobless pay bill.

To delay a vote and almost certain passage of the amendment, Senate Majority Leader Alben W. Barkley (D., Ky.), ahead of schedule, recessed the Senate overnight.

Kilgore Faces Defeat

Senator Harley M. Kilgore (D., W. Va.) meanwhile was waging a losing fight to restore to the diluted unemployment compensation bill a provision for $25 maximum weekly jobless benefits, with the Federal Government paying the added cost. This amendment, asked by the President, faced almost certain defeat.

In his September 6 reconversion message the President not only recommended a uniform maximu mof $25 for 26 weeks to tide displaced workers over the postwar jog lag, but "urgently" asked Congress not to dismantle the United States Employment service at this time.

"To make any decided change in the machinery to handle this problem now would cause unnecessary hardship to workers and veterans," he said. "It would slow down the entire process of reconversion.

Lucas Firm on Stand

But Lucas told the Senate it is time to end "divided authority" between the State and Federal governments, on placement of workers as well as unemployment compensation. He said his amendment would "prevent buck-passing' 'and place responsibility solely on the States.

Senator Barkley protested the amendment had not previously been considered by the Finance Committee. Senator Brien McMahon (D., Conn.), said it would "cause chaos in the labor markets of the country" to return employment offices to State control at this time. Barkley asked for a recess when the question was presented for a vote.

The Lucas amendment would return "borrowed" State employment

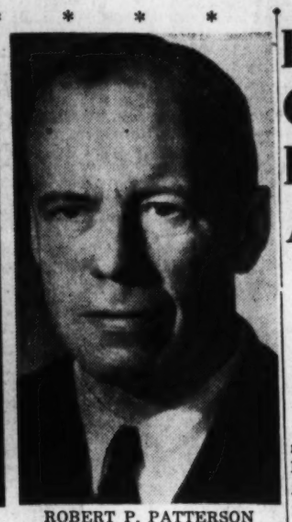
HAROLD H. BURTON



ROBERT P. PATTERSON

Resignation Of Stimson Reluctantly Accepted

Ohio Senator Was Member of Truman Committee; Party Line-up Change Seen

By Edward T. Folliard

President Truman yesterday nominated Senator Harold H. Burton of Ohio to be an associate justice of the United States Supreme Court. He is 57 and a Republican, the same political faith as Owen J. Roberts, whom he succeeds.

The President also nominated Undersecretary War Robert P. Patterson of New York to be Secretary of War, succeeding Henry L. Stimson. Patterson, who enlisted in the National Guard in 1915, as a private, is 54.

Mr. Truman said that he had accepted Stimson's resignation very reluctantly, and he praised the venerable Republican as one of America's great public servants. Stimson will be 78 Friday.

Came Here as Republican

Although the prospective new member of the Truman Cabinet, Secretary-designate Patterson, came to Washington in 1940 as a Republican, he is no longer regarded as one by the Republican national organization. Party spokesmen pointed out yesterday that Patterson, in writing his biographical sketch for the 1941 edition of Who's Who, listed himself as a Republican, but in the subsequent edition of 1943 was silent on his political affiliation. Organization Republicans said there was other evidence to indicate that Patterson was a back slider.

President Truman said that two members of the Little Cabinet—Assistant Secretary of War John J. McCloy and Assistant Secretary of War Robert A. Lovett—had submitted their resignation, but he added that he was not accepting them at this time.

The Chief Executive announced also that Former Justice Roberts had agreed to serve as chairman of a committee to award medals of merit to civilians.

Senator Burton, a friend of President Truman in the latter's legislative days and an energetic member of the famed Truman Committee, had been mentioned from time to time in the speculation over a new Supreme Court justice.

Given Better Balance

Nevertheless, there were exclamations of surprise when President Truman announced the Ohioan's nomination at a White House news conference yesterday afternoon.

The choice of Burton gives the nine-man tribunal better geographical balance by bringing in another mid-westerner to take the place of an easterner.

It also affects the political line-

Big Jap Paper Is Suspended By MacArthur

Mocked U. S. Orders On Atrocity Stories; Air Travel Ban Eased

Tokyo (Wednesday), Sept. 19 (AP). Tokyo's big newspaper Asahi was suspended today after it mocked United States orders to print atrocity stories by hinting they were designed to offset reports of American outrages in Japan.

While General MacArthur cracked the censorship whip, he showed his clemency by granting a partial restoration of Japan's grounded air transport, allowing a maximum of four planes to operate at once from Tokyo.

MacArthur's headquarters was noncommital on reports from Washington that the State Department was startled and concerned by his plan to cut the contemplated 400,000-man army of occupation in half.

Nor was there comment on suggestions in Washington that President Truman might have to define American occupation policy.

Under Two-Day Suspension

But despite the criticism at home and the flareup in the Japanese press that put Asahi under a two-day suspension, the occupation was proceeding smoothly.

Shigeru Yoshida, career diplomat once jailed for opposing the war, met Emperor Hirohito Monday night and was given the Foreign Minister portfolio, Japanese sources said. He succeeded Mamoru Shigemitsu, signer of the articles of surrender and once the confidante of Dictator Hideki Tojo.

Of Tojo's war-making 12-member cabinet, 7 were in Yokohama Prison facing charges as war criminals, an eighth was ill but in technical custody, 2 were suicides and the other 2 were at large because they have not been listed as wanted.

The occupation was spreading. Gen. Walter Krueger, commander of the United States Sixth Army, was due to arrive tomorrow in the western naval base city of Sasebo to prepare the way for Marine landings Saturday.

'Khaki Lobby' Leader Called For Hill Quiz

A Fort Belvoir private, leader of an unofficial "khaki lobby" of drafted fathers who want release from the Army, has been invited to appear today before the Senate Military Affairs Committee.

Private George L. Mark, 37-year-old father of three children, has received orders to ship out today to Camp Shelby, Miss., an embarkation point for Pacific troops.

Chairman Elbert D. Thomas (D., Utah) of the Senate Military Affairs Committee, however, notified the War Department late yesterday afternoon that if the Fort Belvoir private desires to be heard he is to appear at 10:30 a. m. today.

Mark's orders for Camp Shelby, Fort Belvoir said, were dated the afternoon of September 12, the last day on which he led his fellow privates to the United States Capitol to put their case for discharge to various Senators and Representatives.

Now You Can Join The Navy and Eat Penicillin Sundae

San Diego, Calif., Sept. 18 (AP).—Now its penicillin ice cream!

The San Diego Naval Training Center's sanitation and preventive medicine staff reports that mixing penicillin with ice cream makes possible its administration by mouth instead of through the usual hypodermic injections.

The Navy said the treatment had been found effective for streptococcus throat infections, scarlet fever, trench mouth, gingivitis (inflammation of the gums), stomatitis (inflammation of the mouth) and acute or sub-acute tonsillitis.

'No Plans To Return Soon,' Says MacArthur

Madison, Wis., Sept. 18 (AP).—Gen. Douglas MacArthur answered current reports regarding his return to the United States in a message received by Gov. Walter S. Goodland today by stating that "I have no plans for returning to the United States in the near future."

Goodland ha dwritten President Truman asking that when General MacArthur returned to America he be permitted to visit Wosconsin, where a welcome would be prepared for him. The President replied it was agreeable to him, but left the decision to General MacArthur.

Waste Charged

Army Had Too Many Doctors Behind Front, Investigator Says

By George Connery

The Army used its doctors in an antiquated, wasteful manner that resulted in too few of them on the fighting lines and too many elsewhere, an Army colonel told the Senate Military Affairs Committee yesterday.

Furthermore, he pointed out that the home front's health was dangerously neglected when the armed forces took 60,000 doctors to care for 12 million men and left 90,000 for the 120 million civilians at home.

The witness was Col. W. Paul Holbrook, who testified as an investigator for the committee and not as a representative of the War Department. He also:

1. Revealed that the Army, now doing a "satisfactory" job of releasing doctors, expects to have 17,000 back in civilian life by January 1, a 3000 increase over an earlier estimate. Part of this will be accomplished by letting out surplus doctors regardless of their points. If the staffing ratio can be reduced, this figure will be increased.

2. Described the future of American medicine as jeopardized because of the draft, and suggested it may be necessary soon to return to their studies medical students who have had one year in the armed services.

3. Proposed a new concept for the Army medical department, under which mobile organizations would replace many of the static units that normally haven't enough to do.

4. Outlined a plan for a national department of health, under a Cabinet officer who would be in charge of the military medical services and rank with commanders of Army, Navy and Air Forces.

Colonel Holbrook said he had the approval of three medical councils for this program "in principle" and that it would be presented to the American Medical Association this week.

Our Army Medical Department had at its disposal the talents and knowledge of American medicine which led the world between 1920 and 1942, he said. Besides, it had available the greatest and fastest surface and air transportation systems and facilities in the world.

How was this used?

"Let us look at the record," Col. Holbrook said. 'Unfortunately, our Medical Department entered this war almost exactly the same

Surgeon General Testifies

Half of All Hospital Patients Are Mental Cases, Parran Says

By James E. Chinn

Surgeon General Thomas Parran of the United States Public Health Service disclosed yesterday that more than half of the Nation's hospital beds are occupied by patients with mental and nervous disorders.

He and other witnesses before a House committee studying a bill which would establish in the Washington metropolitan area a 4½ million dollar national neuropsychiatric institute, labeled conquest of mental disease one of the country's top-ranking postwar medical problems.

Dr. George Stevens, medical director of the National Committee for Mental Hygiene, placed the number of hospitalized mental cases at 600,000, and predicted a steady rise. This figure, he explained, does not include those mentally ill who are in special wards in general hospitals, "nor does it include that vast number of nervous patients—nervous stomachs, nervous hearts, etc.—that occupy general medical facilities."

The war, Dr. Parran said, brought into "sharp focus" the importance of doing something to solve the mental health problems. He pointed out that of the 4½ million men rejected for military service, 1,600,000 were turned down because of mental disorders.

The mental health of the people of the country, he declared, is far from satisfactory, and in proportion to the importance of mental ailments in the Nation's health picture, "very little research is being done—very few brilliant

Pair of Nylons By Christmas Set As Outside Limit

New York, Sept. 18 (AP).—Less than one pair of nylons per woman will be available by Christmas with predicted production of 3,500,000 dozen pairs by that time, the National Association of Hosiery Manufacturers said today.

The association said it probably would be late spring or early summer before women could buy nylons whenever they wished and that rayons would nave to supplement nylon supplies probably for a year or more.

All hosiery stocks are expected to be lower during the changeover from rayons to nylons with greatest shortage of stockings since the beginning of the war at the turn of the year.

LABOR

per cent in five years without raising prices, Mr. Truman snapped emphatically that when Davis made the statement he was not speaking for the Administration.

Schwellenbach, who was also known to have been more than a little annoyed and chagrined that statements on Government wage policy were being made without his consultation, said to reporters: "I'll tell you this: nobody in the Government is going to make a statement on what the Government wage policy is before the matter is thoroughly talked over."

With a grin, Schwellenbach declined a reporter's invitation to enunciate his own wage policy, but made it clear that when one was issued he would have had a voice in it.

On the strike situation and his plans to handle industrial disputes, the Secretary explained that hitherto he has had no means of entering an important case because it was usually under WLB domain. For the future, he intends, through a greatly expanded and strengthened conciliation service, to "go in and find out what the situation is."

Sees No Need for New Laws

Schwellenbach said he did not think additional legislation was needed to meet coming labor problems. He explained that he proposes to work through the War Labor Board until its functions lapse and that he had the assurance of WLB Chairman George Taylor that a cooperative and harmonious working relationship would obtain. When necessary, Schwellenbach said, he would certify disputes to the WLB and in such cases would never overrule their decisions.

With the WLB under his jurisdiction, he explained, "I will have the right to get into a situation when I want to," but that he does not intend "to be an appellate court" for the WLB's decisions.

He expressed his hope that the Board would be replaced by mechanics for handling industrial conflicts to be agreed upon at the labor-management conference now scheduled for Oct. 29. He declined to suggest what future procedure might be on the ground that he did not wish to precede its determination with a decision of his own.

Seizure Not His Policy

Pressed to define his present powers in strikes, Schwellenbach stilladmitted that the Government could still seize industrial plants but he added emphatically that seizure was not his policy and that such a step would be taken only in an "extreme situation." He also stated he did not favor compulsory arbitration.

Referring to seizures and the binding nature of WLB decisions, he said. "That was all right for war time. But peace time has come and we've got to get back to peace time methods."

Schwellenbach declined specific enumeration of the new agencies to come to his department, explaining that the relevant executive order had not yet been signed and that he did not know its contents. Besides those agencies indicated by the President for transferral, the Secretary indicated that he also hoped to receive the Reemployment and Retraining Administration, now subject to OWM direction.

Situation is Clouded

He said that a recently-raised legal question clouded the situation regarding the transfer of the National Labor Relations Board and that the Labor Department was not obtaining the independent Fair Employment Practice Committee. Whether it will gain the National Mediation Board and the unemployment compensation functions of the Social Security Board was not clarified.

Consolidation in the department, however, of the major Federal agencies concerned with employment and industrial disputes, and the President's clear designation of Schwellenbach as the Government's prime labor officer with all powers to act in labor matters, conforms with Mr. Truman's policy to restore "Cabinet government." He is known to feel that the great number of independent and semi-independent agencies which were created during the New Deal, and each of which had only partial functions in a single field should be centralized as soon as possible.

British to Retain Own Food, None for Europe

London, Sept. 18 (AP).—Sir Ben Smith, minister of food, asserted today that British food stocks have been reduced to a minimum and no more may be used to supply continental Europe this winter.

"Europe's need must now be met from the exporting countries," he said, "the limited stocks of food we now hold are only sufficient, with the expected imported supplies, to maintain our present standards."

'Frisco Golf OOpen To Be Revived

San Francisco, Sept. 18 (AP).—The San Francisco winter open golf tournament, indefinitely postponed last week, has been revived under a new sponsor with prize money increased from $10,000 to $15,000.

The meet will be backed by the California Golf Writers Association, which yesterday enlisted the financial support of William P. Kyne, general manager of the Bay Meadows race track. Kyne agreed to guarantee $15,000 in war bonds, plus $5,000 in bonds to be used as gate prizes.

Abandonment of the tourney last week by its former sponsor, the San Francisco Junior Chamber of Commerce, was accompanied by criticism of the Professional Golfers Association which the chamber termed "money-avid" and not interested in promoting the game.

Middle Class Germans Held Uncooperative

Frankfurt, Sept. 18 (U.P.).—Walter L. Dorn, former professor at Columbia University and now chief political adviser to the United States Military Government in Germany, charged today that the German middle class lacks political "backbone" and is not cooperating in denazification of the Reich.

"Many of them take a nonpolitical attitude," Dorn told a press conference. "They as a whole are not strong in anti-Nazi sentiments."

Dorn said that the military government is trying to strengthen the sense of governmental responsibility in such Germans, feeling that it will "strengthen their backbones."

Dorn's remarks came just three days after plans were announced by American officials for the first democratic elections in Germany since 1932, the election of township officials in the American occupation zone.

Aussies Welcome Davis Cup Bids

Melbourne, Sept. 18 (U.P.).—Australia will welcome a challenge for the Davis Cup by America or any other nation next year, but acceptance depends upon the condition of the best Aussie players, it was revealed today.

The Australian Lawn Tennis Association cabled American net officials that a United States challenge would be welcomed. However, it was pointed out by A. H. Barraclough, association secretary, that Australian, as holder of the cup, was liable to receive challenges from any contenders.

"It is up for them to challenge and for us to accept," he said.

up on Capitol Hill. The governor of Ohio, Frank Lausche, is a Democrat, and he is expected to appoint a Democrat to fill the vacancy caused by Burton's selection for the high court. That will strengthen the Democratic majority in the Senate and make the line-up as follows:

Democrats, 56; Republicans, 39; Progressive (LaFollette), 1.

There has been talk that Governor Lausche, in filling the Senate vacancy, might name James M. Cox, a former governor of Ohio and the Democratic nominee for President in 1920. Cox, a newspaper publisher, is now 75.

Senator Burton's membership in the Supreme Court, it is believed, will not cause any change in the court's philosophical divisions. Burton is described as a "conservative Republican with liberal views." Those who know him say that, in this respect, he is very much like the man he succeeds, former Justice Roberts.

Under No Legal Obligation

President Truman, in making this his first appointment to the Supreme Court, was under no legal obligation to name a Republican. However, he apparently never entertained the thought of anybody other than a Republican, considering the already lopsided character of that tribunal.

Mr. Truman, it was said, had narrowed his choice to two Republican Senators, the other being Warren Austin of Vermont. Austin's age, 67, was the deciding factor for Burton, who is 10 years younger.

Most Senators expressed warm approval of the hard-working Burton. Senator Hatch (D., N. M.) said:

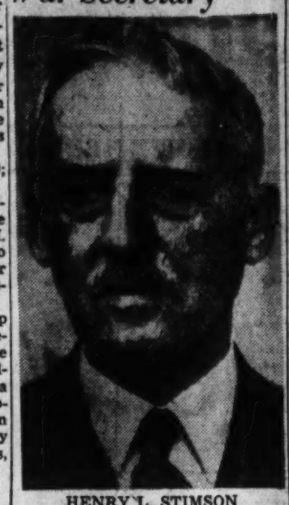
"It's an admirable choice from every standpoint except that of the Senate. We will miss him very much as a Senator."

Deeply Appreciative

Senator Burton was in Ohio yesterday but was expected to return to Washington at 11:20 a. m. today on the Baltimore & Ohio railroad. He told reporters that he was "deeply appreciative of the confidence which the nomination expressed in me," but added "I can make no further statement until it has been sent to the Senate and confirmed."

The resignation of Secretary Stimson recalled the dramatic circumstances under which he joined the Roosevelt Cabinet in 1940. France was falling and the Republican National Convention was about to open in Philadelphia. In this situation, the news broke that President Roosevelt had asked Stimson and the late Col. Frank Knox, two of the foremost men in the GOP, to join his Cabinet.

Retires As War Secretary



HENRY L. STIMSON

Both men, firm supporters of Roosevelt's foreign policy, accepted.

Promptly Read Out of Party

Stimson and Knox were "read out of the party" by the Republican leadership. On Capitol Hill, in hearings on their nominations, they were called "war mongers." They took over the leadership of the War and Navy Departments in one of the most critical periods in the Nation's history, and directed the building up of the greatest war machine the world has ever known.

Stimson, who earlier had served as Secretary of War in the Taft Cabinet and then as Secretary of State in the Hoover Cabinet, has been planning to resign ever since VJ-Day. As he told reporters recently, "this can't go on forever."

So far as President Truman was concerned, Stimson could have served as long as he cared to serve.

First GI To Reenlist Sworn in by General

Frankfurt, Germany, Sept. 18 (AP). Sergt. James F. Koehler of Hollywood, Calif., was described officialy as the first American serviceman in the European theater to reenlist in the Regular Army in the new recruiting drive.

He was sworn in today by Lieut. Gen. Walter B. Smith, chief of staff of the U. S. Forces in the European theater.

Koehler will leave soon on a 14,000-mile trip home for a 90-day furlough. A machinist in civilian life, Koehler has been in the Army 30 months of which 24 have been overseas.

plans that were utilized during the war of 1917-1919.

"These were accepted without revision in light of the military experience and medical advancements of the succeeding 20 years."

There was no change in the ratio of hospitals to troops, and furthermore an effort was made to staff all these hospitals on the same scale used for a 100,000-man peacetime Army, he told the senators.

With the rapid transportation available, Col. Holbrook said:

"It is difficult to justify the staffing of all hospital beds throughout the world with medical personnel on this basis when our civilian population was being neglected and the future of American medicine was being jeopardized."

Lists Fallacies

He listed four fundamental fallacies in present medical tactics:

1. That the doctor is comparable to the fireman—you do not need him all the time but he must be there when you do.

2. That the doctor in the hospital is an inseparable part of the beds, equipment and physical properties and that he remains with that hospital as a part of it whether there are any patients or not.

3. That the numberical strength of military units is the determining factor in arriving at the number of doctors required.

4. That the doctor must be first a medical officer and second a professional man.

Col. Holbrook described as a "common delusion" the belief that and reduction in medical strength would result in our boys being deprived of life-saving services of the doctors.

He cited the 50 doctors assigned to a 15,000-man infantry division as "far too many for simple medical care and preventive medicine of a group of healthy young men" yet "far too few to care for the medical requirements of the division in battle." He emphasized that these doctors are permanently assigned to a division regardless of whether it is in constant action or in an inactive theater.

6.5 Doctors Per Thousand

Colonel Holbrook declared that the Army's doctor requirements could be vastly reduced if the principle of mobility were adopted.

"Nowadays there is no reason why a surgeon should not operate one week in New Guinea and the next week in Italy."

The present requirement is 6.5 doctors per thousand in the American Army. In contrast, he noted that the RAF had 2.5 during the war, now is operating with much less; the AAF Training Command uses only 2.3; and there is an average of only one doctor for 1500 civilians, with many communities getting by on one for between 3000 and 6000.

In proposing his national health program, Colonel Holbrook reminded the committee that "today the United States is possibly the only major nation not utilizing a minister of health or similar official whose concern is national health," and cautioned that it is "necessary and urgent" that some centralizing solution be worked out.

Secretary for Health

Under his plan the secretary for health would be responsible for personnel (procurement and assignment), supply, research, Government hospitals, civilian medical liaison, public health service, preventive medicine, industrial medicine, and national accident control, in addition to the armed forces medical services and veterans' hospitalization.

He proposes a gradual elimination of the veterans' hospitals as such, substituting a plan of Government payment of all or part of veterans' health insurance costs. The veteran thus would be able to go to the doctor of his own choice, in his home community.

Col. Holbrook said American medicine, public spirited individuals, labor and industry are supporting the idea of a nationwide health insurance program, under which benefits could be extended to most of the population.

If such a system is set up, he expects it will meet all operating expenses, with the Government paying a part of the initial cost of hospitals.

Col. Holbrook is a native of Tucson, Ariz., a past president of the Arizona State Medical Association and a member of the American Medical Association.

tional Labor Relations Board for strike votes among the approximately 550,000 employes of the Ford Motor Co., General Motors and Chrysler corporations, awaited word as to President Truman's attitude and what changes were to be made in the Department of Labor.

2. Industry heads met in a regularly scheduled meeting of the Automobile Manufacturers Association, but pointed out it had been called long before the present controversy developed. They withheld comment on the labor situation.

3. An official of the National Labor Relations Board said that to take a strike vote among General Motors' 350,00 employes in 126 plants would cost about $150,000 and that special action by the Controller General in Washington would be required to provide that much money.

The 4500 employes of the Kelsey-Hayes Wheel Co., whose walkout on August 23, touched off most of the current labor trouble in the Detroit area, continued today to resist efforts of the International UAW-CIO to get them back at work.

Senator Demands Hirohito's Arrest

On Pearl Harbor

Premier Feels That Hirohito Was Fooled

Tokyo, Sept. 18 (U.P.).—Premier Naruhiko Higashi-Kuni said today he believed Emeperor Hirohito was "deceived" by Japanese militarists during the climatic period immediately preceding the attack on Pearl Harbor.

Higashi-Kuni, under questioning by more than 50 Allied correspondents, said he hoped to create a commission to investigate responsibility for the war.

He insisted that he did not know whether the Emperor was aware that the attack on Pearl Harbor had been planned, or whether he was aware of atrocities committed by the Japanese.

Shigenoro Togo, Japanese Foreign Minister in late 1941, told the United Press at the same time that neither he nor Saburo Kurusu, his "peace envoy" to Washington, had advance knowledge of the Pearl Harbor assault.

In anothe rinterview, Admiral Mitsumasa Yonai, Japan's present and six times past Navy Minister, said the attack on Pearl Harbor represented the maximum effort of which the Japanese felt capable.

"Pearl Harbor," said Higashi-Kuni, "remains a great state secret. We still don't know the full circumstances surrounding it."

He promised to put a direct question to the Emperor—whether he had been informed of the Pearl Harbor plans in advance—and transmit the answer to Allied correspondents.

Togo Silent on Peace Message

Tokyo, Sept. 18 (A.P.).—Former Foreign Minister Shigenori Togo told the Associated Press today through his son that he did not want "at the present time" to discuss whether Emperor Hirohito received President Roosevelt's peace message on the eve of Nippon's sneak attack on Pearl Harbor.

Togo gave no reason for declining to say whether the peace message which United States Ambassador Joseph C. Grew handed to Premier Hideki Tojo, had reached the hands of the Emperor.

The question was relayed to Togo through his son since the former foreign minister now is abed, victim of a heart ailment.

Vice Admiral Edward L. Cochran, chief of the Bureau of Ships of the Navy Department, will address the Washington Alumni Club of the Illinois Institute of Technology at 7:45 p. m. tomorrow at the Roger Smith Hotel.

Russell's Bill Proposes Trial As War Criminal

The arrest and trial of Emperor Hirohito as a war criminal would be called for by Congress if a resolution introduced by Senator Russell (D., Ga.) yesterday is adopted.

Russell offered the resolution after taking the floor to denounce the Japanese ruler.

Assailing what he described as a "soft peace" for Japan, Senator Russell (D., Ga.) said the Mikado is a "power-seeking tyrant posing as a god" and "one of the greatest agressors of history."

Fear "Another War"

"He is the god Emperor," the Georgian declared, "in the direction of whose imperial palace millions of Japanese faced and prostrated themselves in the dust in abject apology for their failure to kill enough Americans to win the war."

If present policies are continued, Russell said, "we are headed for complete failure and another war" in the Orient.

Shortly before Russell spoke President Truman issued a statement saying the Japanese war lords are being removed from Korea, but that complete wiping out of Japanese control there will require time and patience.

Future of Korea

"Such Japanese as may be temporarily retained," he said, "are being utilized as servants of the Korean people and of our occupying forces only because they are deemed essential by reason of their technical qualifications."

The building of a great nation has now begun," he added, "with the assistance of the United States, China, Great Britain and the Soviet Union, who are agreed that Korea shall become free and independent."

There had been complaints from Korean sources that the Japanese surrender had failed to effect any immediate change in the administration of that country.

Col. Balchen Wins Decoration For Espionage, Refugee Trips

Another of the "hush hush" stories of the war came out yesterday with announcement that Col. Bernt Balchen, the flier, has been awarded the Legion of Merit.

Balchen, a resident of Glendale, Calif., served with the Strategic Air Forces in Europe. He was assigned the job of evacuating by air some 2000 Norwegians from Sweden, and of parachuting espionage agents and armament, ammunition and explosives to the underground forces in Europe.

Operating under adverse weather conditions, flying unarmed and exposed constantly to enemy attack, Colonel Balchen completed from March to December, 1944, a total of 110 round trips between United Kingdom and Sweden with the loss of only one aircraft.

"In addition to the Norwegians, over 900 American internees and evacuees and nearly 190 of other nationalities were safely evacuated. Numerous important diplomatic Army officers were transported as well as large amounts of strategic freight," the citation added.

Balchen is now on duty with headquarters Army Air Forces.

Colonel Balchen, one of the best known of peacetime aviators, flew with Admiral Richard Byrd across the Atlantic in 1927 and later piloted Byrd to the South Pole.

Hearing Set Today on New Health Center

A House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee subcommittee will begin public hearings today at 10 a. m. on a bill designed to establish a four and a half million dollar neuro-psychiatric institute for the United States Public Health Service in or near the District. Introduced by Representative J. Percy Priest (D., Tenn.), chairman of the subcommittee, the measure contemplates a far reaching program for research and development in neuro-psychiatric research and treatment.

Reds Report Intervention Plea From Iran

Moscow, Sept. 18 (U.P.).—The Soviet press said today that a request for intervention in Iran had been sent to the Foreign Ministers' Council in London by Teheran editors favoring Iranian opposition parties who demand drastic internal reforms and a foreign policy based on friendly relations with the Soviet Union.

Developments in Iran are reported day by day in the Soviet press, particularly the struggle between government and opposition parties.

One dispatch today said that authorities of the present Iranian government of Premier Muhsid Sadr are "persecuting democratic organizations."

Tass news agency recently reported that an autonomist movement had been launched in oil-rich northern Iran. A manifesto was issued in the form of a leaflet in Tabriz demanding administrative and cultural autonomy for 4,500,000 inhabitants of Azerbaijam nationality and language, within the framework of the present Iranian borders.

The Soviet Union has an Azerbaijan republic, lying between the Armenian republic and the Caspian Sea.

Bridges as Well

Mid-Ocean Airdromes Pass Tests

London, Sept. 18 (A.P.).—Floating airfields in mid-ocean, and even floating highway bridges across such waters as the English Channel, now are technically possible, the British Admiralty said tonight.

Scientists have found a method of floating landing strips and "bridges" on water like a corpet, the Admiralty said in releasing details of the first experimental ocean air base.

That such tests had been carried out successfully in secrecy by the United States and Britain was reported unofficially several weeks ago.

Long Visioned by Experts

Aviation experts long have visioned mid-ocean landing bases as a boon to long distance travel.

This latest discovery of how to build an airfield with a tin can landing base brings these dreams within the realms of actuality, the Admiralty declared. "Man made islands" built to any shape and size might prove another outgrowth of the discovery, the statement added.

The experimental airstrip — called "lily" because of its resemblance to lily leaves on a pond—consists of hundreds of buoyancy cans with hexagonal surfaces.

These are linked together so they give in a controlled manner to the motion of the sea from any direction, yet remain sufficiently rigid to take the weight of heavy aircraft.

The whole surface of "Lily" is flexible so that it will not break up. The flexibility is controlled by use of underwater dampers. At present the cans are only six feet across and 30 inches deep, but the Admiralty said their size could be scaled up to take a greatly increased weight.

Aircraft loaded with 9000 pounds of freight have landed and have taken off from a test strip only 520 feet long and 60 feet wide.

Floating seadromes of this experimental size can be assembled by 40 men in an hour's time, the official statement said.

They can be taken apart, transported in ships and reassembled anywhere. With the present size buoyancy cans, a strip 2500 feet long could be moved in three merchant ships.

Their creator, identified by the Admiralty as R. M. Hamilton, a professional inventor who has been in the navy since the outbreak of the war, says that "Lily" will remain flat in waves up to 36 feet from crest to crest.

The floating airstrips were a development of the "Swiss Roll," a floating pier which withstood severe tests during the Normandy landings. It can be rolled up on board ship, then rolled out again from ship to shore.

Larceny Suspect Boasts to Police; Faces 2 Charges

A boast to police that he had been taking numbers bets here for the last 16 years without once being "pinched" yesterday resulted in gambling charges against Lee Woods, 58, of 1129 N st. nw., police said.

Woods, police said, was being questioned in connection with the theft of a $300 ring from Edna R. Flynn, 658 F st. ne., when he told of his success as a lottery "runner." He even produced betting slips from his pockets to prove it, police said.

So, in addition to a charge of larceny after trust of the woman's ring, Woods now faces charges of operating a lottery and possession of lottery slips.

THE SECRET HISTORY OF A SURRENDER
by Forrest Davis

ANOTHER of war's closely-guarded secrets can now be told. The secret history of the deliverance of Northern Italy, the orderly surrender of a million men, the sparing of the vengeful Italian blood-bath ordered by Hitler. Revealed to the Post by the Office of Strategic Services so that the people may know of the epic accomplishments of a handful of Americans—it's a story of daring spies, of men who risked life carrying secret orders, of Germans who deserted Hitler's crashing empire. It's a true record of negotiations that almost fell through—of proceedings that read like an Oppenheim novel. Read both parts, beginning this week.

Epes' Tryst With Blonde Told at Death Trial

Columbia, S. C., Sept. 18 (U.P.).—Details of a Christmas rendezvous Samuel C. Epes kept with "the other woman" a month before he is alleged to have killed his pretty young wife and buried her body in a foxhole were introduced at his murder trial today.

The young Virginian, son of a wealthy Richmond industrialist and until recently an Army lieutenant, appeared haggard and agitated as the State drove for a conviction that would send him to the electric chair or put him behind prison bars for life.

Lieut. John W. McKenna, of the provost marshal's office at Fort Jackson, S. C., where Epes was last stationed, testified that the handsome officer admitted to him he had spent five days last Christmas with pretty Miss Nelson Kingsland, 20, a blonde war worker of Lake Charles, La., whom he met while on Louisiana Army maneuvers.

McKenna said Epes denied having had intimate relations with her while acknowledging he stayed in the same hotel room with her during the weekends.

Epes wrote a tender farewell to Miss Kingsland before attempting suicide in the County Jail here, while awaiting trial. He asked her to find "a good man" and marry him, ending "remember that I loved you."

McKenna testified that Epes also had admitted "picking up" another girl in New Orleans and taking her to a tourist camp for the night.

Epes' parents, Mr. and Mrs. Travis H. Epes, sat behind their son. Across the courtroom, twisting a handkerchief, sat small, sandy-haired Mrs. T. G. Williams, whose blonde daughter, Mary Lee, was found buried in a foxhole of the Fort Jackson rifle range last February 14. Epes had led police to the grave after reporting her missing two weeks before. He told police he had lost his head when his wife died suddenly after taking too much sedative for a headache.

minds are working on this problem."

Dr. Parran described the bill, sponsored by Representative J. Percy Priest (D., Tenn.), chairman of the committee, as the "most significant" of the 121 public health measures introduced in the present Congress. He said it would serve three general purposes: (1) aid States with Federal funds to combat mental disease; (2) train personnel to handle the cases, and (3) assist in thte promotion of clinic centers for diagnosis and treatment of neuropsychiatric disorders.

Dr. Stevenson, who specialized in psychiatry at John Hopkins University Medical School, told the committee at least 1300 clinics should be established throughout the country to handle mental cases—one for each 100,000 of population.

"Mental disease does not rank high as a cause of death," he said, "but it looms very high as a cause of incapacitation and absorbs a large percentage of the budget of States giving adequate service to the mentally ill. In 1941 the total expenditures in State hospitals was $142,282,480."

Capt. Francis J. Braceland, chief of the neuropsychiatric branch of the Navy's bureau of medicine and surgery, deplored the little attention given to the cause and cure of mental ailments, and the lac kof psychiatrists to meet even the demands of the expanding Veterans' Administration, the postwar Army and Navy, the Public Health Service and civilian institutions and schools.

Captain Braceland said the Navy, after careful screening, discharged approximately 100,000 men for "all sorts of illnesses that come under the heading of emotional difficulties."

terials and facilities needed for an expanded home-construction industry, and also to help fight inflated building costs and real estate prices."

6. NHA, in conjunction with industry representatives, "will provide an information and advisory service on home values available to any prospective home buyers, regardless of whether Federal assistance in financing is involved."

Snyder declared it is well known that the present housing shortage will continue for some time and "that there may be pressure to increase the price on new homes in response to active demand."

"All Federal agencies," he said, "have been directed to use all appropriate measures to discourage inflationary pricing of new homes. This is a problem which the industry itself must help to overcome."

WPB Chairman, following up Snyder's direction by announcing the end of L-41—which controlled commercial building such as theaters and stores as well as new homes—pointed out that spring is the earliest date at which much construction can be anticipated and said the intervening period would permit builders to build up their supplies.

"On the whole there may be some shortages, but these won't be half as bad for the contry as the continuing of limitations on homes, commercial and public works construction, which seemed arbitrary to so many people."

The lumber situation is beginning to ease up, he said, but brick, cast iron pipe, gypsum board, clay sewer pipe, structural tile and asphalt roofing materials are still in tight supply.

Limited Sale Price

L-41 limited the cost of new homes to $8000 an dallowed NHA to set building quotas for various regions in proportion to manpower and material supplies.

The building industry has estimated about 500,000 new homes can be built next year as the first step toward satisfying a market for 12,500,000 homes—which it is expected will be built within the next 10 years. When the industry is going at the rate of one million homes a year, it will be providing jobs for around five million workers, according to the estimates.

What OPA fears is that the building boom will kill itself off—as it did after World War I—by overchargings and by moving into the high-price range where Americans cannot afford to buy. All surveys show that big market for homes is in the $4500 to $7500 price range and a recent survey by Architectural Forum showed a majority of prospective home owners who would not build if "prices go up $1000."

Costs Up 30 Per Cent

Building costs now are up 30 per cent above prewar, with lumber up 70 per cent. The biggest inflation at present, however, is in the used house field and land itself. OPA had hoped for a compromise reconversion order which would have limited the number of times a house can be resold within a year and provided a system which would have guaranteed a percentage of lower-priced houses as well as have permitted persons wishing to build more expensive homes to do so.

Washington Builders Gratified by Decision

Washington builders and realtors yesterday approved War Mobilizer John W. Snyder's decision to lift wartime controls over residential construction on December 15.

"This will initiate the largest home building program in history," declared Morris Cafritz, realtor, realtor, 1404 K st. nw.

Joseph E. Merrion, president, National Association of Home Builders, predicted construction will get under way at once with an unprecedented number of low-cost dwellings for low-income families in the offing. He said builders and financing organizations would honor Snyder's request to voluntarily hold down prices on new homes.

Pledges Assistance

In a telegram to Snyder, Herbert U. Nelson, executive vice president, National Association of Real Estate Boards, asserted the organization was "glad to pledge every assistance within our power to see that this program is carried out on a sound basis."

Charles J. Rush, executive secretary of Washington Real Estate Board, said removal of controls will permit realtor-builders to proceed with plans to fill Washington area housing needs.

"It's a good thing for the whole industry; it will end a world of red tape and confusion," according to Preston Wire, builder, 1526 K st. nw.

Charles H. Tompkins, president, Washington Building Congress, expressed belief that Snyder's action will lead to immediate revival of the Home Planning Institute, an educational program for prospective home builders, abandoned by the congress in view of wartime Federal restrictions on home building. He contents "this will solve the housing problem quicker than anything which has been done."

Congratulates Leaders

The Home Builders Association of Metropolitan Washington said in a statement that Washingtonians may expect to see as many as 10,000 units erected within the first full year of unhampered home construction.

President Truman, Snyder, construction coordinator, Potter, and other Government leaders are to be congratulated, the association said, on their wise decision to return to the traditional American philosophy fo free enterprise.

NATIONS

not back Yugoslavia's demands to the limit.

"We shall try to obtain a just decision on Trieste and Istria," he said. "Territories which belong to Croats and Slovenes should be returned to them. Those which are Italian in character, it will be proper for Italy to take."

Diplomatic quarters interpreted this to mean that Russia was prepared to accept a compromise which would leave Trieste in Italian hands, possibly wtih its important port under international control as the British and Americans have proposed.

Molotov Cool

Molotov appeared cool, however, toward the British and American view that Italy's colonies should be put under international supervision.

"Individual trusteeship of Italian colonies should not be ignored," he said, adding:

"Those who think that the principle of collective trusteeship is a good one may point out to us certain other territories (besides Italian colonies) to which it might be applied, and this would make us bolder in the application of that principle."

He did not elaborate, but there was speculation that he might be referring to certain Pacific areas where the United States will ask for singlehanded control.

Molotov said "no charge can be preferred" against the governments of Romania, Bulgaria and Hungarl. He described them as "Democratic countries enjoying the confidence of an overwhelming majority of the people."

Recognition Withheld

Britain and the United States have refused to recognize these governments but have recognized the government of Greece—where, Molotov said, the sooner an "actually democratic government" was established, "the better it will be for Greece herself and the Allies."

Molotov said Russia did not consider the Dodecanese islands a colony.

"The Dodecanee are under discussion now not as a colony but as an Italian possession," he said in reply toa question.

He declared that the Dodecanese should not be left to the Italians, but adjourned the conference before further questions could be asked concerning these strategic islands guarding the Dardanelles.

In Your Marketing Plans... Consider the Caribbean

Most businessmen, planning now for resumption of peacetime business, agree that full employment will depend partly on foreign markets to absorb America's tremendous production.

Under the foresighted Merchant Marine Act of 1936, you can build exports easier than ever before. U. S. merchant ships, so vital during war, can be just as valuable during peace... furnishing prompt, reliable service to American business at fair shipping rates.

In your plans, consider the convenient Caribbean. Here among the beautiful, romantic Caribbean Islands and in nearby South America are many market centers like Ciudad Trujillo. Markets for various U. S. products, with backlogs of needs accumulated in years of shipping shortages.

Alcoa has served this area for years, and will furnish full service again... when the demands of war are met.

War Department

The greatest repository of wisdom has been withdrawn from this Administration by the resignation of Secretary Stimson. Of late years he has been able to function at his desk only a few hours in the day. This has called for delay in the making of decisions. But a decision by Secretary Stimson was always worth waiting for. And there has never been an occasion to which he did not rise with all his accustomed sureness. The last case in our recollection was the crucial debate in the Cabinet on the Japanese request of August 10 to maintain the Emperor as "sovereign ruler." Secretary Stimson's sage counsel in this matter was decisive; it was left to Secretary Byrnes to put it into words. With Japan occupied, Secretary Stimson has now laid down his office, and he will go into a retirement which no man in our public life has earned in richer measure.

Some years ago we wrote of Secretary Stimson, who will be 78 on Friday, that he was entitled to that ease with dignity which Cicero regarded as the due of a good and fruitful life. Since then the Secretary has made a career for himself as a War Minister. It has been one of several careers in the public service which Mr. Stimson has had in his lifetime. Every one of them would have entitled him to a niche in our national history. There was his Secretaryship of War in the Taft Administration where he gave an example of administrative aptitude. A spell in the Governor Generalship in the Philippines lives in Filipino history for faithful service in keeping Filipino lands secure against the big landlords. As Secretary of State in the Hoover Administration Mr. Stimson proved himself a statesman. This appellation is much abused nowadays, but, attached to Mr. Stimson, it meant an awareness of what was happening in the world and a sense of direction in coping with it. Topping off the record is the task he has now relinquished as Secretary of War throughout the greatest war in history. The entire record makes his public work monumental.

In Mr. Stimson's footsteps Judge Patterson, at present Undersecretary of War, will seek to follow. The nominated Secretary has the same devotion to the public service which has distinguished Mr. Stimson's career. Indeed, it is said that Mr. Stimson made it a condition of his acceptance of the Secretaryship that Mr. Patterson should be Undersecretary. He is a dour, even Spartan, worker, who drove himself as much as any soldier in the field in the prosecution of the war. Judge Patterson as Secretary will insure not only continuity of administrative experience but also the maintenance of a knowledgeable liaison with Congress.

Monsignor Ryan

It was not so long ago that the name of Msgr. John Augustine Ryan, now dead at the age of 76, caused almost as many apprehensive shudders in certain privileged places as the names of Lenin and Trotsky. His clerical status was considered, even by many of his coreligionists, as the disguise of a fanatical and dangerous revolutionist, and it was probably a matter of much concern, but of no great surprise to them, when Dr. Ryan was denounced by Mrs. Elizabeth Dilling as one of the principal agents of communism in the United States. The great mystery was why the ecclesiastical authorities tolerated this radical cleric who was so constantly and tirelessly stirring up trouble among the workers by telling them they had been defrauded of their rights, who openly served on strike committees, and openly approved the child labor amendment, in plain defiance of the statement by this bishop or that theologian that such legislation would undermine the sanctity of the home.

The answer to this, of course, was that Dr. Ryan was himself a moral theologian of much repute and thoroughly orthodox. There was no real disagreement between himself and other ecclesiastics as to the moral principles involved in the conflict of capital and labor. The right of the workers to a larger share of the general wealth, and in the ownership of the tools of production, and to organize themselves for the attainment of these rights, had been set forth by Pope Leo XIII in the famous labor encyclical Rerum Novarum. The question was how such principles could be applied in a highly industrialized industrial society like that of the United States. Dr. Ryan's answer was that industry itself must be reorganized on democratic principles and that an end must be made of the system of "industrial feudalism" by which the economic life of the country had been governed since the Civil War.

Most of the reforms demanded by Dr. Ryan have now been accomplished, and most of the causes he had championed have been won. The most radical of them, the principle of the minimum wage, has been for some years incorporated into law. And while many besides Monsignor Ryan shared in the battle for these things, there is no doubt that his zeal, his special position, and his increasing influence on the thought of the leaders of his own church were the means overcoming many an obstacle. All in all, he was one of the most effective as well as one of the most energetic champions of labor ever to arise in the United States.

MacArthur's Blind Spot

It is sad and confidence-shaking to see General MacArthur mixing politics with statesmanship. This he did in his statement from Tokyo on Monday. He forecast that within six months the occupation force, "unless unforeseen factors arise," will probably number not more than 200,000 men. No man who had a wholly objective regard for such a stupendous and imponderable task as MacArthur's would have ventured either to enumerate it or to put a figure upon it. That task is just beginning. It is as big a gamble as, to quote General MacArthur's own words about the landing, "has been taken in history." In these circumstances a supreme commander, if he had his eye only on his job, would not have sought to tie his own hands. Of course, he will get help from the Japanese, when they have figured out the meaning of what he said. But they will be encouraged to put up only a facade of compliance, so as to tear it down when General MacArthur is through.

We are forced to conclude that when he made his Monday statement General MacArthur's attention was elsewhere than in Japan. It appears to have been in Washington. The conclusion is strengthened when one ponders the addendum to his 200,000 figure. This is, he said, "a size probably within the framework of our projected regular establishment and which will permit complete demobilization of our citizen Pacific forces which fought so long and so nobly through to victory."

This addition was a purely gratuitous contribution by General MacArthur to the domestic debate on our military policy. Congress, as the supreme commander well knows, is seething over demobilization. It is difficult for a legislator, no matter how well intentioned, to rise superior to the clamor which is coming to him from his constituents. Many of them are even grumbling that in this vital matter President Truman has not given them stronger leadership. MacArthur's testimony will simply aid the forces which are beating upon Congress to demoralize our demobilization policy. MacArthur likewise makes it harder for the Administration to maintain the draft for the 18-25 group in our population. Finally, he puts difficulties in the way of evolving a sensible postwar military policy in conformity with our global responsibilities and commitments.

We have said the MacArthur statement was political. Actually it verged on the demagogic. Note, for instance, the use of "citizen" in the comment that the MacArthur estimate would "probably" permit "complete demobilization of our citizen Pacific forces."

Certainly the supreme commander has dropped many cubits in our estimation as a result of this excursion into our domestic politics. He knew the delicacy of the ground he was on. There is no policy as yet on the "projected military establishment," yet the supreme commander presumes to prejudge it. He knows that the draft and demobilization are all tangled up in popular emotions, yet he seeks to stoke up those emotions. It is disheartening that a man of MacArthur's stature and genius should thus seek to play politics with our occupation policy.

Nobody, as we have said several times, could have made a better start in his august role as supreme commander than MacArthur. He showed how deeply versed he is in Japanese psychology. He revealed himself capable of being a proconsul in the grand manner, and this is exactly what was needed to carry out the Potsdam terms. That record is now marred, and he has made the future in the Far East uncertain and ominous, since so much depends upon him. Evidently MacArthur could not resist the siren voice of the homeside politicos to whom he has occasionally lent an ear in the past. It was an unworthy and deplorable performance on the part of a man who is doing a job that belongs to world history and who seemed to be making himself a high place in it.

New Justice

For his first nominee to the Supreme Court President Truman has chosen one of the ablest and best-loved men in the Senate. Senator Harold Hitz Burton has an enviable record of public service. He is a man of unquestioned integrity and devotion to the public welfare. Although he has never been on the bench, his fairness and his judicious attitude toward problems that come before him for decision are ingrained characteristics.

So far as his personal qualifications are concerned, the fact that Senator Burton is a Republican is of little significance. Politics sits lightly on this son of Ohio. As Mayor of Cleveland from 1935 to 1940 and as a member of the Senate since 1940, his reputation has not been won as a Republican fighting partisan battles. Rather it has been made as an efficient administrator and a thoughtful legislator who is eager to hear all the facts and to base his ultimate judgment on considerations of the public welfare. It may be taken for granted that this basic trait in his nature will be carried over into his service on the Supreme Court.

From the viewpoint of the court as a whole, however, it is of great significance that a Democratic President has had the courage to appoint a Republican justice. When Owen J. Roberts resigned only one Republican—Chief Justice Stone—was left on the high bench. All of President Roosevelt's new appointments had been Democrats. The addition of another member of the party in power to this formidable list would have left the court with a deplorable lack of balance. We think the President is to be highly commended for responding to this situation as a statesman.

When we pointed out the lopsided condition in the Supreme Court last week and our editorial was reechoed at a White House press conference, the President said that he is a Democrat. Some hastily assumed that he intended to say only Democrats would be appointed to the bench during his Administration. Obviously he did not so intend. In buckling down to the serious problem before him, the President recognized the necessity of avoiding reflection of only one party's philosophy on the bench. His problem became, therefore, to find an outstanding Republican lawyer who would be an able judge and not a mere politician on the bench. It is quite natural that he should have turned to Senator Burton who had worked closely with him on the Truman Committee in the investigation of the war agencies.

It is true that Senator Burton is known largely as an executive and legislator. But his experience in the law has been extensive. He was a practicing lawyer from 1912 to 1935. We are not disturbed by the fact that part of this time he was in the service of electric power companies. Harold Burton's loyalties are to the public interest and the national welfare. His mind has never run in a narrow groove and we have not the slightest fear that it will do so on the bench. We suspect that his nomination will bring wide public approval and the only regret of the Senate in confirming him will be the loss to its own membership.

Labor Reorganization

The long overdue rejuvenation of the Labor Department has come just in time to fit that agency for an effective role in the reconversion period. It will have need of all the effectiveness it can muster, as the recent news from Detroit makes clear, to iron out the tangled problems of industrial relations. Secretary Schwellenbach has promised to "step square in the middle" of the dangerous strike situation once he has been accorded the power to do so. The power has now been put in his hands by the President's regrouping of the scattered Federal agencies concerned with labor affairs.

The War Labor Board, the War Manpower Commission and the United States Employment Service, according to President Truman's announcement at his press conference yesterday, will all function within the Labor Department. This is to say that they will function in the future in cooperation with one another and with other Labor Department bureaus instead of, as was so often the case during the war years, in opposition or at cross-purposes. The Conciliation Service and the War Labor Board, for example, have a natural relation to one another; both are hampered when completely divorced as in the past. The opening up of employment opportunities, which is the job of the Employment Service, has obvious need for the research materials of the Bureau of Labor Statistics; the two can operate best in conjunction with one another.

What the President has done, quite evidently, is to give Secretary Schwellenbach the tools he most urgently needs for the task immediately at hand. The Labor Department reorganization, it was made plain, is not yet completed. Presumably Mr. Truman had in mind, when he said that all labor activities would eventually be centered in the department, that the National Labor Relations Board and the National Mediation Board would also be transferred. These agencies, like the WLB, are quasi-judicial in character and must retain an independence not required in the case of simple administrative bodies like the War Manpower Commission. In their role as tribunals they should be insured freedom from reversal or dictation by the Secretary of Labor. With this safeguard, however, they belong logically within his general jurisdiction.

Whether the welfare and social security activities of the Federal Government should also be centered in the Labor Department is a question calling for extremely thoughtful consideration. Some of the work of the Employment Service falls within this field. So do the functions of the Children's Bureau and the Women's Bureau now within the department. Our own view is that these responsibilities should be grouped together in a separate Department of Welfare which would take in also the Office of Education, the Public Health Service and the several apprentice and vocational training services of the Government. The Labor Department can best fulfill its obligations to the national economy and its statutory duty to promote the welfare of wage earners by confining itself to the problems arising out of employer-employe relations and to the stimulation of job opportunities.

Few factors will so vitally affect the Nation's readjustment from war to peace as the smooth establishment of a high level of employment at wages which will maintain effective consumer purchasing power. The Labor Department can contribute greatly to the achievement of this transition in an orderly fashion. It would be tragic at this juncture to permit a disruption of the national unity forged in war and of the high degree of labor-management cooperation which the war effort engendered. Cooperation must be fostered for the attainment of genuine peace.

Washington Calling

By Marquis Childs

Crowley's Career

FOREIGN ECONOMIC Administrator Leo Crowley has letters from two prominent Republican Senators congratulating him on the speedy way in which he brought lend-lease to an end with the close of hostilities.

"We know we can do business with you," one of the Senators wrote.

Crowley is one of the most curious figures to come out of the Roosevelt Administration. He has assumed the role of broker between the New Deal and Congress. It is a role in which Roosevelt found him very useful, and Truman apparently intends to continue him in the same capacity.

The FEA Administrator has informed the President that he will stay on in his present job through the transition period. During this time, he will help to liquidate FEA by transferring to the State Department those of its functions that State may want.

One of the Republican Senators who wrote to Crowley suggested that England had dollar balances in this country of $2,250,000,000 which could be used to pay for goods in process and in transit until a long-term arrangement was worked out.

AS CROWLEY sees it, this supports the logic of his action on lend-lease. If the Administration had let it go on, taking the easy way out by temporizing, then Congress would certainly have turned against the kind of long-term agreement which must be reached.

Suspicions would have been aroused. Crowley's role of trustworthy broker would have been jeopardized. The next time he came before a Senate or House committee, he would be treated as any other New Deal petitioner asking for funds.

Then there was the question of equal treatment for all nations that had been receiving lend-lease. If any special treatment had been accorded England, then all the other nations would have set up an immediate clamor.

Some countries had come in long before termination of Lend-Lease to negotiate special agreements whereby the flow of supplies would continue uninterrupted, with the government paying in cash after termination. France signed such an agreement last February.

In discussing his position, Crowley cites the example of Russia. With the announcement of the ending of Lend-Lease, the Russians agreed to an interim loan out of which they would pay for what they continued to get.

Crowley is sensitive to criticism of his action on Lend-Lease. He knows, of course, that New Dealers have always eyed him suspiciously because of his big business connections.

Chairman of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp., the Government organization which guarantees bank deposits, from 1934 to '39, Crowley resigned to become chairman of the board of Standard Gas & Electric at $75,000 a year. Returning to the Government in 1942, again as chairman of FDIC and also as Alien Property Custodian, Crowley has continued to receive his $75,000 salary.

CROWLEY IS a close friend of Victor Emanuel, a director of Standard Gas and a dozen other corporations. Emanuel has had important conections in England as well as in America. In Who's Who he lists a residence there from 1927 to 1934 where, according to the same source, he was "Master of Woodland Pytchley Hounds and later Joint Master of Pytchley Hunt."

As conservative broker for the left-of-center Administration in power, Crowley will soon have to go to Congress again. The Export-Import Bank can extend loans totaling $2,800,000,000, but this would be absorbed several times over if only a fraction of the foreign requests were granted. UNRRA is seeking a new apropropriation.

But something more is needed. An overall agreement covering European needs will be sent to Congress for approval sooner or later. And the man who "can do business" with Congress may go to the front for that.

Against Furlough

Of all the bungling in Army discharges, I think the latest idea of a 45-day furlough for those awaiting eventual discharge is the most insidious.

Take the case of fathers of 2 or 3 children recently drafted. My husband is in this category. He is 29. Imagine him coming home on a 45-day furlough, knowing of course that he has a wait of unknown duration before him before he becomes a civilian again. So he comes home and takes a look around at our neighbors, who, to a man are in one of two categories:

1. Civilians a few years older than my husband in their same nice jobs with salaries many times what my husband makes as private.

2. Officers stationed in Washington who have never had financial worries.

He'd have 45 days in which to have these facts rubbed in. I wouldn't be home with him. I am working to supplement our $100 Army allotment and have to stay on the job.

As for his investigating job possibilities, can't you picture anyone knowing whether they can hire him in blank month, blank year, when he is due to be discharged under the present point system?

Occupation Of Japan

By Sumner Welles

Much Remains To Be Done

THE PROVISIONS of the Potsdam Declaration and of the surrender terms are sufficiently broad to enable the victorious powers to carry out any policy they consider most certain permanently to eliminate any new Japanese menace to the peace of the world. The sole reservation is that the Japanese people may retain their imperial form of government should they so desire.

The steps which we have so far taken do not necessarily indicate what our long-range occupation policy is to be. Military considerations must at first be paramount. But American public opinion should understand the full significance of these steps. For American security and world peace will be endangered should they in fact be indicative of our definite policy. The steps already taken will make it difficult to convince the Japanese people that their defeat is due to our naval, air and military superiority rather than to the atomic bomb alone. They will make it harder to make them understand the full measure of their national war guilt, and the nature and extent of the regeneration which they must undergo before they can once more be admitted into the family of nations.

Japan's attack in 1941 represented the final stage in the policy of conquest upon which Japan's leaders decided many decades ago.

THE ARMY and the Navy were primarily responsible for the course which the Nation followed. But during the past generation the Japanese industrial and financial magnates have been working hand-in-glove with the imperial high command. From the time of Japan's first invasion of China, they have been joined by swarms of speculators and profiteers who throve on the military exploitation of occupied territories. In recent years the politicians have taken part in this gigantic racket.

Fascism admirably served the purposes of all of these diverse groups. It has penetrated deeply into Japanese life. The great mass of the Japanese people has blindly obeyed the directives issued from this corrupt veneer which tops the social structure. And corruption has eaten into every class in Japanese society.

Our present occupation policy seems designed to retain in continuing control precisely those elements which have been directly responsible for the course which brought on such immeasurable tragedy to the United States and its allies.

The present Emperor, whether or not he feebly deprecated the attack upon Pearl Harbor, sanctioned the war. As an individual he should not be regarded as divorced from his government's policies, nor freed from responsibility for the hideous atrocities perpetrated by his military leaders. The question of the continuation of an imperial government has nothing to do with Hirohito's personal involvement. Our policy up to now has greatly strengthened the Emperor's individual authority. It has absolved him in the eyes of the Japanese people of all blame.

The Australian government has made it clear, as we have not, that it refuses to treat with Japanese war lords as "honorable foes." We have as yet done nothing to make the Japanese army and navy lose face with their own people. The dissolution of the imperial general headquarters, and the publication of the list of a few war criminals will not be sufficient.

Our incredible blunder in announcing that we would keep Japanese authorities in Korea in power—even for an hour—after our occupation unmeasurably strengthens the prestige of the Japanese army with its own people.

General MacArthur's proclamation that Japan's economy will be subject to only nominal control has created the belief that Japan's industrial leaders will retain their privileged position.

THE JAPANESE Diet is composed of totalitarian puppets. It is the war Diet. Yet it was permitted to assemble to prove to the Japanese public that "unconditional surrender" constitutes a voluntary agreement on the part of the Japanese government.

What is even more incomprehensible, the announcement has been made, with our consent, that national elections will shortly be held under the sole supervision of the present Japanese government, composed as it is of individuals who all share in Japan's war guilt, so as to obtain an expression of the "popular will."

How can we imagine that democracy will suddenly spring to life in Japan when those influences which have so long dominated the Japanese masses, which have forced Fascism upon them, and which have led them into war, are permitted to remain in control?

It was because of the same defects in Allied policy toward Germany in 1918 that the second world war was rendered possible. Should a similar policy be pursued in the case of Japan, the consequences will be as grave.

The Japanese people will naturally "co-operate" for the time being, just as the German people did in the early 1920s, because the dominating forces within Japan see that it is the only way in which they can hope to retain their own control.

IS IT WITHOUT significance that the Japanese Ministry of Agriculture has publicly announced arrangements for food distribution which make it possible for food to be withheld from all Japanese who do not follow the government's policy?

Are we complacently to believe the blind assurance of Japan's generals that nothing is farther from their thoughts than the creation of underground nationalistic military societies similar to those so efficiently organized in Germany in 1919?

There is no solution of the problem now presented other than an occupation policy which will eliminate from any position of real control every element responsible for Japan's course of conduct during the past generation. It must be a policy which will teach the Japanese people that war does not pay. It must be a policy which will create within Japan a basis upon which at least a rudimentary democracy can be built up.

That will be a policy which implies some years of intelligent, constructive and expensive enterprise on our part. It is a policy which can never be carried out if this government heeds the present outcry within the United States for an immediate reduction or replacement of our occupation forces, and for letting Japan "stew in its own juice." But it is the only policy which spells future security for the American people.

Communications must carry writer's name and address, though pen names are permitted at the editor's discretion. Letters should be held to not more than 200 words. They are subject to condensation.

Publish Point Facts

In the light of recent disclosures to the Senate Military Affairs Committee, it would appear that much of the criticism hurled at those responsible for implementing the demobilization machinery was unjustified. It is apparent now that in recent weeks, as the flood of protests from servicemen swelled to alarming proportions, the Army already had the answer. But no attempt was made by the War Department to inform the eight million men most nearly concerned of just what the ultimate picture was to be. They were left to feed on fragmentary news reports, on the inconclusive and often contradictory statements of some of the spokesmen for the high military, on the panic-stricken charges of some of our Congressmen and on the alarmist editorializing of some of our newspapers.

It is a good portent for the future of American democracy that upward of eight million men do not choose to wait meekly and unprotestingly in a state of ignorance while their superiors debate upon their disposition. Right now they would like to know just who the two million men slated for discharge by Christmas will be likely to include. Will the critical score have to be lowered to achieve this goal? If so, by how many points? Soldiers would also like to know how many men there are with over 85 points, with between 85 and 80 points, 80 and 75, 75 and 70, etc.

Couldn't some sort of correlation between points, time and separation facilities be worked out so that the individual could determine from his point score aproximately when within the next 10 months he may expect discharge? And couldn't demobilization statistics be posted monthly or even bimonthly to show what progress is being made? If achievement falls short of predicted estimates, the failure should be explained and steps taken to remedy it. Likewise, it should be proved to the victims of isolated dislocations that their situation is not the over-all picture. Reasons should be given for these dislocations. If authorities competent to do so do not supply the troops with this information, they must expect a continuation of the present dissatisfaction.

Separate Playgrounds

I know wars do many queer things to people, but I never thought it would have the effect of making some people feel that they are not fit to breathe the same air of a playground where Negro children play. On September 4, the Southeast Council of Citizens Associations decided to support the Board of Recreation policy of playground segregation.

I am sure it is the effect of the war, because heretofore the city, its parks, and other facilities bought and maintained by the taxpayers' money—were for the enjoyment of all.

Why should we now pattern our civic life after Hitler's program? How many promising young men have been killed or maimed while fighting to wipe out that kind of thing?

D. C. Opera House

Mary B. Shaw's suggestion in the letters column of September 13, that Washington build an Opera House to commemorate our victory, is surely an excellent one.

Perhaps the only reason why Washington does not have proper theaters, an opera house, enclosed swimming pools and public baths, is because we do not have suffrage by means of which we could elect a mayor who would see to it that we got what we wanted.

Labor's Future

By Mark Sullivan

Coming Conference

WHATEVER IS DONE about the strikes and threatened strikes in the automobile industry, whatever is done about any strikes or any phase of labor relations, the setup of parties in interest is the same. It is the same in the over-all "labor-management" conference called by President Truman to take place in October.

In all these conferences and negotiations are three parties—labor, management and Government. The impacts of the three upon each other, the relative force with which they urge their points of view, will determine what comes out. The three points of view are apparent.

Labor has a single, simple point of view. It is higher wages. For that labor will single-mindedly contend. The labor leaders in the conference know that success in their careers is measured by one standard, higher wages for the workers they represent. Some of them may have broad understanding of the effect of wage increases on the country's economic structure, but wage increases are their direct bread and butter. In a legitimate sense, the labor leaders are trustees for their group. Labor is their client, and they will strive for what will please labor.

MANAGEMENT has one point of view. It is to resist wage increases. But management will not be as single-minded as labor. The force of management resistance will be modified by a second point of view. Management wants to get busy. Management knows that there is an enormous demand for goods, that to pay for the goods there is an enormous quantity of money in people's pockets and bank accounts, and that, because money is so abundant, buyers are not greatly concerned about price. In this condition, some of management may be under temptation to grant the wage increases, add the increases to the price of goods, and get on with meeting the enormous dammed-up demand. Besides, management's power to resist pressure for wage increases has been greatly diminished by the advantages given to labor by legislation during the past 12 years.

Government has been prevailingly favorable to wage increases. During several weeks past, and up to the hour of this writing, actions and utterances of some Administration officials have taken this line. In some instances they have said that wage increases should be limited to cases in which wages could be increased without an increase in the cost of goods. But whether many wage increases can be made without increasing the cost of goods is very problematic. After a rather extreme attitude favorable to a policy of wage increases had been taken by one official, President Truman said the official did not speak for the Administration.

AT THE CONFERENCE, one group will be absent, the consumer. There will be no one specifically representing the consumer, no one fighting to prevent increased wage rates and increased cost of living as single-handedly and resolutely as the representatives of labor will fight for wage increases. The consumer is not organized, as labor and management is. The consumer has no CIO Political Action Committee, no Philip Murray, nor William Green, nor John L. Lewis; no National Association of Manufacturers nor Chamber of Commerce.

If the consumer were organized he would have a powerful voice in these conferences, and in politics, for there are a lot of him. The consumer and his interest can be symbolized by one immense group, the owners of war bonds—there are some 80 million of them. When one of these paid $75 for a bond in, say, 1942, he could, with the same money, have hired for 100 hours a plumber, or at least a plumber's assistant, then getting, say, 75 cents an hour. If that 75-cent wage rate is now raised to $1, the owner of the war bond, when he cashes it in, can hire that same plumber for only 75 hours.

To avoid such a possible change in the purchasing power of war bonds is an objective the Administration should take into account.

'Larger Families'

Your editorial of September 11 shows an encouraging trend in family relationships in this country. However, may I point out that whereas an extremely low rate of population decrease does indicate national decay, a very high birth rate is a direct cause of war and famine.

All the peace conferences, social reforms and prayers in the world will not prevent more disastrous wars and famines as long as overpopulation continues. It seems that whenever a people becomes overcrowded it instinctively commits mass suicide through war.

Witness the thickly populated islands of Japan and the high birth rates of Germany and Italy, as well as India. As John Fischer says in "India's Insoluble Hunger," "behind India's economic nightmare lies a single ominous fact: there are too many Indians."

As indicated in your editorial, the women of this country automatically strive to equalize the population (because most are free to decide how many children they shall bear). The same could be true of the world.

The solution to peace is worldwide knowledge of the means of voluntary family limitation.

Rising Rivers Peril Virginia Towns

Flooded Waynesboro Areas Are Evacuated; State Roads Open

By the Associated Press

High water from hurricane rains moving up the East Coast since Saturday have flooded at least one Virginia town, and will bring rivers in other towns over their banks within the next few days.

Rainfall for at least a part of the State—Richmond, Lynchburg and Norfolk—was between three and four inches in the three days ending at 8 a. m. yesterday. With rain still pouring down at noon yesterday, flooded Waynesboro reported more than five inches since last Thursday.

Loudoun Schools Shut

High waters closed more than half of the Loudoun County schools yesterday as buses were unable to cross many of the streams in the county. Among the schools closed were Leesburg High, Douglass High, Aldie High, Middleburg, Ashburn and others. Goose Creek was reported to be over the road to Oatlands, five miles from Leesburg on Route 15 and is steadily rising. According to Sheriff S. P. Alexander, traffic still continues on this road. On Route 7, Goose Creek was three feet from the bridge and is rising. The rain and winds have flattened cornfields and caused much other damage to Loudoun County farms and roads.

Weather stations in Lynchburg and Richmond predicted the James River would be above the flood stage by Wednesday night or Thursday morning. The Huntington, W. Va., weather bureau said that New River will overflow at Radford and would be out of its banks at Glenlyn by midnight last night.

Most of the State's primary highways which were blocked by high waters monday night were clear yesterday, the State highway department said.

But if the rain continues, we are likely to have serious trouble," F. A. Davis, personnel engineer of the department, said.

There were more showers yesterday, but not a heavy downpour, according to the weather bureau, which says that although there will be cloudiness yet today, the rainy season will have passed by then. There will be no more high winds.

Corn was thought to be the only crop seriously damaged by the high winds and pelting rains, which blew the stalks to the ground. Heaviest damage was reported in Princess Anne and other tidewater counties. Late crops in the lowlands around Roanoke were flooded but no serious damage was reported.

L. M. Walker, jr., commissioner of Agriculture, said that it is too early to estimate the financial loss the storm caused, if any.

Low Areas Evacuated

Waynesboro was busy yesterday evacuating residents from its lowlands sections as the South River, a branch of the Shenandoah, broke its banks, flooding the main business section of town and threatening private and business property in many sections of the city.

The river rose sharply and broke Monday night. Residents of nearby Oak Hill and maupintown sections were evacuated shortly before 4 a. m. yesterday and placed in temporary quarters in the Wilson Jackson Elementary School. Red Cross motor corps and disaster committees were rounding up cots and temporary living facilities for them and other residents who were to be moved from their homes to schools until flood waters subside.

Swelling Potomac May Exceed Flood Mark At Several Points

By the Associated Press

High waters expected to swell the Potomac River to flood stage at several points followed yesterday in the wake of two days of rain and high winds which uprooted trees, disrupted power and telephone services in some sections and marooned several hundred families at Miller Island.

At Cumberland, Fire Chief Reid C. Hoenicka ordered flood gates in the Potomac opened after the stream rose to a stage of 12.22 feet at noon yesterday. The flood stage of 17 feet was expected, but city officials voiced no alarm over the possibility.

The rise in the river was caused by a rainfall of 2.61 inches at Cumberland during the preceding 36 hours but the precipitation shrank to a drizzle during the day.

The United States Weather Bureau at Baltimore predicted a stage of 26 feet, four below flood level, by Wednesday noon at Hancock; 24 feet, one foot above flood stage, at Williamsport Wednesday afternoon; and 23 feet, five above flood mark, at Harpers Ferry, W. Va., Wednesday night.

Washington was expected to have a stage of eight feet, one below flood level, Thursday morning.

In the meantime, Maryland as a whole had numerous instances of minor flooding of highways and streets, broken power lines, felled trees and other minor damage as the result of winds ranging up to 45 and 50 miles per hour from a combination of a northeaster followed by the backlash of the northward bound tropical hurricane.

Near Baltimore, the wind sent water from Back River several feet deep over the causeway leading to Miller Island, marooning approximately 300 homes overnight.

At Ocean City, as elsewhere, damage was light. Mayor Daniel Trimper made a tour of the resort, where winds died down yesterday (Tuesday) and the sun came out—as it did in the Baltimore area.

Rivers Also on Rise In Eastern Panhandle

Martinsburg, W. Va., Sept 18 (Spl.).—A precipitation of slightly more than five inches of rain in this Eastern Panhandle gave rise to fears of flood conditions today but with prediction calling for colder and clearing it was hoped that situation would be controlled before great damage was done.

The Opequon, east of here was out of banks threatening to block the road to Charles Town. The Potomac was up four feet at noon and still rising. Back Creek was out of bank and near the level of the bridges on the road to Berkeley Springs. State Route 11 from here to Hagerstown, Md., was covered with water in low-lying spots but travel was not broken.

At Harpers Ferry, confluence of the Potomac and Shenandoah Rivers, a rainfall of 4.61 inches was reported and Potomac was up nearly four feet. The Shenandoah was out of bank at Millville making it impossible for school buses to get through and forcing closing of schools at Harpers Ferry.

Ballots Filled By Same Hand, Expert Claims

Richmond, Va., Sept. 18 (AP).—H. E. Cassidy, Richmond handwriting expert, today testified in the Wise County primary contest that there was "marked similarity" in many of the ballots cast at the Imboden Precinct of that county.

He examined ballots from the Imboden Precinct, where alleged fraud is charged in the contest between L. Preston Collins and Charles R. Wenwick, in the Lieutenant Governor race, and ballots from St. Paul Precinct, where no fraud is suspected.

In the Imboden Precinct he found 31 ballots marked with a pencilled check, all cast for Fenwick, and said, "there are no tremors fo age or disease."

"Close Resemblance"

"All bear a close resemblance and indicate nobody was the least bit drinky. These speak well for the health and sobriety of the people in that precinct," he said.

Among the St. Paul votes the "X" marks were much cruder than in Imboden, Cassidy said.

"I find a much wider variety in the marks than ta Imboden," he stated.

Among the Imboden ballots were 94 marked with pen and ink, all for Fenwick. Cassidy picked out seven and said they were marked in such a characteristic way he was unwilling to believe that seven different people had walked in behind one another.

"These come a little too regular for the general run," he said.

Cassidy examined the ballots at the request of Stuart G. Christian, counsel for Collins, who is contesting vote in the primaries because of alleged fraud in Wise County.

He also examined ballots from Roundtop precinct, which reported 50 votes for Fenwick and 50 for Leonard G. Muse, third candidate in the nomination.

Testifies On Others

Here there was "considerable variety" in the marking, Cassidy said, but not the usual indication of wide extremes in age and education—"not nearly the variety found in St. Paul or the uniformity found in Imboden."

A four precinct, South Wise, was under examination this afternoon.

Cassidy said he would not attempt to say whether the check marks in Imboden were made by the same person with the same pencil. For the ink-marked ballots he said the same color of ink was used and apparently the same pen or pens that were similar.

Collins' lawyers have argued that ballots in some precincts indicated to them that they had been marked by the same person.

2 Units to Absorb Some War Dept. Dismissals

WAR: Two new units are being set up in the Adjutant General's office which will absorb some of the clerical employes who have been slated for release. An office of more than 100 employes is being created to answer letters from members of Congress on the demobilization of military personnel. A second and far larger office, the Military Procurement Service, will be established to encourage young men to volunteer for the Army. This office will have hundreds of recruiting stations throughout the country. Meantime, many War Department employes here are being transferred to other jobs before their discharges become effective. For example, 800 of the 900 employes who wished to remain in Government and who were to be laid off at the Arlington Hall Signal Corps Center have been placed. Three hundred others decided to go back home. Four hundred additional jobs will be eliminated soon at the center, making a total of 1600. About 300 employes who were to be laid off at Ordinance and Signal Corps headquarters also have been placed through the good work of the personnel office.

DIARY NOTES: Treasury Undersecretary Daniel Bell, the Government's best example of a successful career employe, has been offered the chairmanship of the Boston Federal Reserve Bank The job pays $25,000. He would succeed Ralph Flanders who is ready to retire. Bell has even more attractive offers from private banking firms. Perhaps Bell wouldn't consider leaving Government after 35 years in it if we were paid a better salary. . . . Quincy Wright, an international law expert of the State Department, will join the staff of Francis Biddle, the American member of the Allied Military Court. . . . MORE NOTES: Amherst College alumni are trying to persuade Assistant War Secretary John J. McCloy to become president of that institution . . . The President said yesterday he would not accept McCloy's resignation now. Fred H. Grieme, chief of airport development at Civil Aeronautics, will leave soon to advise American military authorities in Germany on the reestablishments of air traffic and other aviation problems in that country . . . Lowery will retire the end of ths month from the General Accounting Office. He has had 47 years of faithful Government service. He's 73 and an auditor.

Federal Reserve is opposed to being exempted from the President's plans to reorganize the Government. The Manasco bill exempts it . . . War Production Board has set up a special unit in the personnel division to help employes to find jobs in private industry. David Winton, former regional director in Minneapolis, is director . . . Civil Service has announced exams for these openings in the Veterans' Administration: adjudicator, $2320 to $2980; contact representatives, $2980 (applications those jobs will be accepted from veterans only), and registration office and chief, registration subdivision, $2980 to $4300. For Internal Revenue, the commission has a limited number of openings, for zone deputy collector, $2320; special agent, $2980 to $3640, and revenue agent, $2980 to $5180. Veterans and employes now in the service will be given preference for all openings.

The House Appropriations Committee will make even deeper slashes in war expenditures than those recommended by the President. Meantime, the agencies are unable to plan until after the Congress makes budget revisions . . . The House Civil Service Committee will clear up the language in the Barkley bill to make sure that it is retroactive. This bill already has Senate approval and it would allow Army and Navy officers to be paid lump sums for terminal leave . . . United States Employment Service will be expanded under the Labor Department. A request for a 10 million dollar deficiency for operating expenses already has been recommended to the Congress.

LETTERS: "Congress could give Federal workers what amounts to a pay raise if it would cut back taxes. It would be a welcomed relief and it would be much easier method to raise the incomes of the white-collar group. L. M. T., V." . . . "Many Federal workers like myself have accumulated sick leave during the war years. We stayed on our jobs while many of our colleagues took every day off they could get. Now that we're about to be discharged I believe it only fair that we be paid for this leave." . . . "As a would-be Federal worker, I believe it is unfair to limit new appointees to veterans and present Federal workers. I have spent four years in college equipping myself to work in Government and now, I find the door closed in my face. A. D. H."

B. &O. Plan Held Sound; Jones Called

Baltimore, Sept. 18 (AP).—An insurance company executive testified today that the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad's 500-million-dollar debt adjustment plan was-"sound" and "financially advisable" shortly after a subpoena was issued in Federal Court for the appearance of Jesse W. Jones, former Secretary of Commerce and Reconstruction Finance Corp director.

John W. Stedman, Prudential Life Insurance Co. vice president, said that his company holds $7,089,000 in B. & O. bonds and has assented without qualification to the plan, for which the railroad seeks court approval.

Jones is expected to be placed on the stand by Randolph Phillips, New York financial consultant and B. & O. mondholder, who is opposing the plan and obtained the subpoena.

Phillips also obtained a subpoena for Cassius M. Clay, who resigned Sunday as B. & O. general solicitor, declaring the plan was "unsound."

In reply to inquiries by attorneys urging a modification of the plan, Stedman said he favored it as it stood and was opposed to further restrictions on dividend payments and other matters.

Phillips, sole objector at the hearing to the plan in its entirety, then cross-examined Stedman. One of the three judges interposed a question directed at Philips, commenting on the latter's criticisms of the railroad's debt retirement program during the past years.

"Frankly, I consider the financial operations and management of the railroad the most disgraceful I have ever seen in railroad history," Phillips declared.

Industry's Compass Points South to this Growing Market

MEMPHIS and SHELBY COUNTY

Memphis has "location efficiency" for manufacturers interested in Southern and Mid-Continent distribution. Dependable markets are here now. Industries already established here say that labor is efficient and easily trained.

Resources include hardwood lumber, cotton, nearby minerals, coal and petroleum. Transportation by the Mississippi River and 10 trunk line railroads increases "location efficiency."

Natural gas, low-cost TVA electric power, pure artesian water—are all municipally distributed. Industries with large demands can be supplied NOW.

Inexpensive acreage for industrial sites is available in Shelby County and in Memphis. River, rail and highway service possible at many of these sites. In the "Sunny South" snowfall doesn't interfere with traffic or business, and moderate temperature provides favorable working conditions.

Tennessee has no manufacturing or sales tax. City of Memphis' tax rate has declined steadily since 1932 and is now $1.80 per $100 valuation. County rate is .87 cents. Business, labor and local government work together.

Choose Memphis for "location efficiency."

AFL Intervenes In Luke Strike

Cumberland, Md., Sept. 18. (AP). John P. Burke, of Fort Howard, N. Y., international president of the Brotherhood of Pulp, Sulphite and Paper Mill Workers, announced today in an advertisement that he had petitioned the National Labor Relations Board to certify his AFL organization as the bargaining representative of employes of the West Virginia Pulp and Paper Co.'s mills in Luke, Md., Covington, Va., and Williamsburg, Pa.

In the advertisement in Cumberland papers today Burke asserted that "we have waited long enough" and that the CIO paper workers' organization committee, after "many weeks of negotiations and two costly strikes" is no nearer a settlement of their grievances.

His action was taken as the CIO union sought another conference with company officials in an effort to settle the dispute that has kept the Luke mill shutdown for the last ten days. More than 1400 workers are involved.

BARNABY By Crockett Johnson

Mr. O'Malley, my Fairy Godfather, found a house for Aunt Minerva to move into, Pop... The haunted house where Gus the Ghost lives.
Fine. What rent is the Ghost asking?
Not much, I guess. It only has a broken chair and an old table in it. And a bed that kind of came apart—
Oh. Furnished! Then there's no OPA ceiling...
No. All the ceilings fell down a long time ago... Well, I'll tell Aunt Minerva she can move out of our house now...
I'll help with her bags, son. Let me know when she has them packed.

The Gallup Poll

Department of Public Welfare As New Cabinet Post Favored

By George Gallup

Princeton, N. J., Sept. 18.—The American people with opinions on the subject vote two to one in favor of creating a new cabinet post in the Federal Government—the Department of Public Welfare, according to a survey made by the Institute.

The great extension of Federal activity in the field of welfare and social insurance and the increasing emphasis in recent years upon Federal participation in education, health, and recreation have suggested the need for a new department headed by a serecretary of cabinet rank.

Establishment of an inclusive Federal department of education, health, recreation, welfare and social insurance—headed by a secretary of cabinet rank—was proposed in a report made public this week by the Committee on Reorganization of Community Service, which made its study for the Women's Foundation, Inc.

In measuring public sentiment throughout the United States on the problem, the Institute asked the following question of a scientifically selected cross-section of voters, representing opinion in all 48 States.

"Do you think another cabinet office, called the Department of Public Welfare and headed by a secretary, should be set up in Washington to include such things as Social Security, public health and education?"

The replies of those with opinions:

Favor another Cabinet office	47%
Oppose	22
No opinion	31

The fact that three in every 10 questioned on the issue said they have no opinion is some measure of the task which lies ahead for groups who want to stir public interest in their project.

Analysis of the finding in this survey indicate that opinion favoring a Department of Public Welfare is to be found in higher proportion among the people who have attended college and among business and professional people, rather than among those in lower educational groups and among manual workers.

However, among those with opinions, this proposition is favored most strongly by those most greatly in need of such services. These are the manual workers and people with the least amount of education. Relatively speaking, opposition to the idea is strongest among farmers.

These facts are shown in the following tables:

	New Post	Op- post	Don't Know
BY EDUCATION
Favor
Those who have attended college	53%	32%	15%
Those who have attended high school	50	25	25
Those who have attended elementary school or less	45	17	38

Professional and business people	53%	27%	20%

MANY NEVER SUSPECT CAUSE OF BACKACHES

This Old Treatment Often Brings Happy Relief

Many sufferers relieve nagging backache quickly, once they discover that the real cause of their trouble may be tired kidneys.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking the excess acids and waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.

When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, a stimulant diuretic, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. Doan's give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Solar homes—more healthful and enjoyable. They will mean jobs for glassworkers.

Glass awnings—fireproof, long-lasting. More jobs for glassworkers.

Fireproof glass draperies—greater public safety—and more jobs from glass.

Glass insulation—in many home appliances—will mean more employment.

Making Postwar Jobs—Out of Glass!

HOW MANY postwar jobs will there be—for soldiers, sailors, war workers? No one can tell exactly. But this much we do know:

Business management, in scores of industries, has long since planned new products, new ventures, new services, that will make jobs by the thousands by creating new demands.

For example, the glass industry in producing for war has found amazing new uses for its product. Imagine glass through which nails can be driven, like wood. Glass that bends. Glass that bounces. Glass that floats, like cork.

Soon, now, beautiful textiles will be made of glass—textiles that are fireproof and mothproof. There will be rotproof glass tarpaulins. Glass awnings. Glass windows that will not frost. Improved glassware for homes.

All these new uses will increase the demand for glass—and demand for goods makes jobs.

The glass industry is only one of many along the Chesapeake and Ohio, the Nickel Plate, and the Pere Marquette, that have planned for postwar employment.

And now that Victory has been won, these industries and others throughout the country will put into operation their plans for the jobs and opportunities all of us want.

Emoluments For Senior Officers

SOME OF THE officers who were chiefly responsible for victory in the greatest war in history have passed the retirement age or will soon reach it. Others are within a few years of it. They will be too old to fight the next war, if there is one, and it is desirable that they should make way for younger men. It is therefore time to consider what is to be done for these men who, as a group, performed their tasks so ably.

LINDLEY

No officer in any of the armed services receives a base pay of more than $8000. There are additional allowances for rent, subsistence, and duty on the seas or overseas. Recently personal allowances for entertainment were appropriated for the highest ranking officers. They are $500 a year for a lieutenant general or vice admiral, $2200 for a full general or full admiral, and $5000 for a General of the Army or Admiral of the Fleet.

But when all these are added up, the highest remuneration received by our highest officers is in the neighborhood of $15,000 a year, part of which is subject to income tax. That is what we paid to men who organized and directed our armed forces and formulated decisions on which the destiny of the Nation and the lives of millions of American youths depended, while men in private life with an infinitesimal fraction of their responsibility were receiving many times as much. Moreover, these officers have received such pay for very limited periods. Most of them had worked for years at very modest salaries. They have had no opportunity to save money from their salaries. Some of them inherited or married private incomes. But many of them have none except their salaries.

WHEN THESE men retire, they will receive $6000 a year. That is the highest retirement pay for all officers down through major generals and senior rear admirals who have served 30 or more years.

After the First World War, the British elevated their top commanders, Field Marshal Haig and Admiral Beatty to the peerage and granted them £100,000 each. In the Napoleonic Wars, they made Wellington a duke and granted an annuity of £13,000. Before this last expression of gratitude, they had made him a marquis with a grant of £100,000 and an earl with a grant of £2000. (The pound brought much more then than it does now.) They rewarded the Duke of Marlborough with an annuity of £5000 which, under certain conditions, was to be enjoyed also by his heirs.

Men like Generals Marshall and Arnold and Admirals Leahy, King and Nimitz have, of course, priceless acquisitions. They have earned historical positions which most of the men who made or retained money during the war will not have. But it would be painful to think that any of them or scores of others who had the most critical responsibilities in the war should spend their years of retirement in obscure boarding houses while other men to whom we owe much less or nothing at all live in luxury.

A LINE BETWEEN those who deserve special rewards and those who do not is hard to draw. There is an additional reason for giving special consideration to all the higher-ranking officers of the war—let us say those with a temporary rank of lieutenant general or vice admiral or higher. That is, to make it easier to retire older officers who, if they remain in active command or administrative posts, will squeeze down the younger officers on whom our future security depends. Some of these older officers might well be used in advisory or diplomatic posts. But, as a matter of sound policy, most of them should soon transfer to the next generation of officers the responsibility for administering the armed forces. This is especially necessary in the Navy, where the average age of top-ranking officers is very high, and the most talented officers in their late forties and fifties have not been allowed responsibilities comparable with those of officers in the same age groups in the Army Air Forces and the Army.

Considering both our debt on account of this war and the need for preventing or winning the next one, retirement on full pay might well be provided for the present crop of senior officers. In addition, special emoluments might appropriately be considered for the chiefs of staff and highest field commanders who discharged their heavy responsibilities so admirably.

Nazis Ousted From Banks by Arlington Man

The Army's No. 1 financial sleuth is Russell A. Nixan, Arlington resident who yesterday was cerdited by ETO headquarters with having been largely responsible for "ridding financial institutions institutions of Nazis in the United States occupation zone in Germany."

Just how Nixon ruled out the Nazis is not, however, revealed by ETO, which stated simply that a plan "originally formulated for this purpose by Nixon" was used to "uncover and oust Nazi officials from the local banking system."

Nixon, a former economics instructor at Harvard University, is now chief of the financial intelligence and liaison section of US FEF's G 5 Division. Nixon is a graduate of Glendale Junior College and the University of Southern California. He has taught labor and economics at Harvard, MIT and Radcliffe, and in 1942 became the national representative at Washington for CIO's Nonpartisan League. Prior to entering the Army last year, Nixon had served as a member of the national labor policy committee of OPA and as consultant to WPB on labor production problems. His wife now lives at 325 N. Thomas st. in Arlington.

ETO explained yesterday that Nixon and a group of 10 men had spent two months in the field visiting military government establishments in almost every section of the American zone in their efforts tot de-Nazify German financial institutions, a task now virtually completed.

Brookings Study Sees Danger Of Inflation in Pay Increases

The Brookings Institution said last night that effective control over prices was lost when the Government adopted its new wage increase policy and that now the prospect of rapid pay advances presents "the major inflationary danger."

In a study prepared by Dr. Harold G. Moulton, institution president, and Karl T. Schlotterbeck, it said that continuation of price control is impracticable after initial prices are set on products, manufacture of which was adopted during the war. Because the Government can not hope to hold the price line without wage-stabilization and rationing.

If wage rates rise, it said, OPA will be forced to review prices all along the line. It added that "war experience in this and other countries has demonstrated that the control of wage rates, the most important element in costs, is indispensable to price stabilization."

The study presented no argument for continuation of wage controls, stating that there was little possibility that any political administration would attempt to enforce rigid controls in peacetime.

But if wages rise, it said, "extensive cost and price readjustments will inevitably become necessary."

Citing as an example the situation at the General Motors Corp., where the CIO United Automobiles workers have demanded a 30 per cent wage increase, the study said the price schedules for new automobiles would have to be reviewed if the increase is granted.

The postwar price for General Motors cars, permitted by OPA, was based on the assumption that present wage rates would continue, the study said. Demands for wage increases in such basic industries as coal, steel, and transportation may be expected very soon, it added, and "if granted, in whole or in part, the whole price stabilization program from the cost end will break down."

The study found the problem of price control greatly magnified at the retail end by OPA's policy of requiring distributors to absorb increased costs at the manufacturing level, stating that authorities apparently realize that rationing of consumer goods in peacetime would not be tolerated.

In addition to the danger spot presented by the "powerful movement for higher wage rates," there also is a threat in acute shortages of certain durable goods "which might encourage profiteering," it said.

This danger is alleviated by the fact that as much as 80 per cent of production is in the hands of some 20 companies subject to strong competition and with low-price policies.

In contrast to the situation after the last war, when prices advanced rapidly because of the fear of shortages of raw materials and foodstuffs, "today we are faced with surpluses rather than shortages," it said.

Md. Women Form Group, Study Plans

Study group plans for coming year were presented by committee chairmen at the first fall meeting of the College Park Branch of the American Association of University Women Monday night at the University of Maryland.

The group plans to conduct studies in arts, education, fellowship and scholarship, international relations, and social studies. Somewhat contrary to the usual custom, explained Mrs. C. E. Cox, president, those who have been named committee chairmen of the five major groups will not select members to serve on their committees, but will enlist membership on a voluntary basis, thus allowing the individual to select the committee of her choice.

Committee chairmen are: arts, Mrs. Carroll K. Shaw; education, Mrs. R. O. Stelzer; fellowship and scholarship, Mrs. Neil W. Stuart; international relations, Mrs. E. E. Hagen and Mrs. Raymond Morgan; and, social studies, chairman not yet named. Each of the major study subjects has been broken down into related subdivisions, thus, arts into creative writing, folk-dancing, handicraft, choral music, drama, etc.

Officers elected to serve during the coming year include: Mrs. C. E. Cox, president; Mrs. J. C. Dockeray, vice president; Mrs. A. S. Patrick, secretary; Mrs. Peter Legins, treasurer, and Mrs. E. D. Trembly, historian. Board members at large are Mrs. Weston R. Clark and Mrs. J. V. Wyckoff.

Central Depot Proposed For Montgomery

Establishment of a centralized equipment depot and storage yard for Montgomery County vehicles and supplies yesterday was proposed by County Supervisor Willard F. Day at the county commissioners' meeting in Rockville Md.

After viewing sketches of the proposed project the commissioners agreed to inspect the site on the County Farm, near Rockville, next week, before acting on the proposal.

The depot would house all police cars, school buses as well as road equipment which is now scattered throughout the county and serviced at various stations. Day's plan calls for a staff of 6 to 10 employed mechanics, carpenters, and other skilled laborers to keep the equipment in repair and service. Under the present system the cars are parked overnight in the open.

Depot Authorized in 1939

In 1939 the commissoners were authorized through State Legislation to build such a depot but nothing ever was done about it. Six acres in Washington Grove were purchased for that purpose. The tract is still idle, the Commissioners having explained that the war hampered development of any plan.

The County Farm site, Day said, is preferable to Washington Grove because it is less then a mile from Rockville which would provide a labor market. He termed it as an "excellent work project" for prison labor because of the proposed location being near the county jail.

Surplus and salvaged school equipment now housed in a shed at the Rockville Faid grounds would also be sheltered in the depot.

Drainage to be Improved

The commissioners voted to use all road equipment at the completion of the fall road improvement program, for opening ditches to prevent bad drainage. The work will be concentrated in the western area of the county where conditions are more serious but in emergency cases the service will be rendered elsewhere, they voted.

Joseph C. Hawkins of Etchison and John O. Duvall, Burtonsville, both honorably discharged from the Army, were reinstated on the county police force pending physical examinations by Dr. V. L. Ellicott, county health officer.

A report of A. A. Moxley, inspector of weights and measures, from March 15 through September 15, showed that of 782 weights and pumps inspected 762 were found correct, 12 over and 8 short weight. All but three have been reinspected and found correct.

Arlington Traffic Deaths Decrease

There were no deaths from traffic accidents in Arlington County during the first half of September, Chief of Police Harry L. Woodyard reported yesterday.

During the period from September 1 through 16, a total of 20 accidents occurred in the county, in which 11 persons were injured, Chief Woodyard said 153 arrests were made during the half-month, 84 of which were for traffic violations.

First successful flight in a heavier-than-air flying machine was claimed by a professor of Santa Clara University, California, in 1884.

OCCUPY

regarded by Japanese intellectuals, was the first newspaper to feel the wrath of censors who moved into Tokyo offices only after the press persisted in publishing inflamatory stories.

The newspaper was a model with the rest of the press yesterday morning in condemning the "regretful atrocities" committed by Japanese on helpless prisoners, and accusing the military of starting the war.

But for three days previously, MacArthur's headquarters charged, it had been scoffing off the atrocity stories and accusing the United States itself of violating international law by unleashing the atomic bomb.

Asahi in one editorial said the atrocity report was put out to overshadow Japanese press reports of outrages "committed by some of the American soldiers in Japan."

Reports Styled Propaganda

Army authorities have never been able to substantiate such reports and have styled them propaganda.

Asahi also declared that the Japanese found the atrocity reports "unbelievable" because moral character always had been stressed among their soldiers. It added that Japanese soldiers were such good father and sons at home than "it cannot be believed" they "committed such cruelties on the unarmed masses" in the Philippines and elsewhere.

If the Japanese lost their chance to win over the Filipinos by their outrages, Asahi declared "this point applies also to the Allied forces now in Japan."

Another editorial declared the United States "cannot deny" that the atomic bomb "and attacks on hospital ships are violations of international law more than the use of poison gas."

It asserted that the United States should awaken "to a sense of compensation for their acts and their responsibility for reconstruction."

All this, with propaganda-tinted headlines and slanted foreign news, MacArthur's headquarters held, violated orders against publishing false statements, destructive criticism and articles disturbing the public.

The rest of the Tokyo newspapers yesterday lashed out at Tojo and other warmakers, accepted MacArthur's recent designation of Japan as a fourth-rate nation, and deplored atrocities and those responsible.

Nor did the present Japanese cabinet escape.

Yomiuri Hochi charged that the present government had taken no step toward fostering free speech, nor support of democratic political parties.

In fact, the newspaper declared, the Government even had stalled on disarming the Army and Navy until MacArthur stepped in and set October 10 as the deadline.

JOBS

facilities within 30 days after enactment. The President recommended Federal control through June 30, 1947.

Senator Kilgore earlier introduced a complete substitute for the watered-down jobless pay bill. The Kilgore substitute would: (1) Make Federal funds toward $25-weekly jobless benefits available to States that want it and (2) make mandatory the bill's present optional provisions for extension of State jobless payments up to 26 weeks.

There were these other developments as the Senate neared the first test votes today:

1. The Senate adopted a clarifying amendment by Senate Finance Chairman Walter F. George, (D., Ga.), assuring jobless payments for 26 weeks for displaced workers entitled to maximum benefits in States accepting Federal aid.

2. Senator Kilgore withdrew an amendment which Senator Robert A. Taft, (R., Ohio), said would have the effect of removing State disqualification of jobless workers who fail to apply weekly for a job.

3. Senator Robert F. Wagner (D., N. Y.) introduced an amendment liberalizing allowances for dependents under the District of Columbia law. The amendment would keep the maximum basic weekly benefit at $20 as at present, but allow a maximum of $25 for jobless workers with dependents. A second Wagner amendment would apply the District scale to displaced Government and maritime workers.

No Interference Seen

Opening debate on the bill, Senator George said there would be no Federal interference with State unemployment compensation systems under the committee's compromise measure. But he denied it is a "State's rights" bill. He said the President himself recognized that any changes in unemployment compensation must be based on State systems and the bill merely keeps faith with the States.

Senator Wagner and other Senate Banking Subcommittee supporters of the Administration's pending "full employment" legislation meanwhile filed a report with the Senate urging enactment of the jobs-for-all legislation without further "weakening amendments." The report charged that modifying amendments proposed by Senators Taft, Radcliffe (D., Md.) and others would reduce the Wagner-Murray full employment measure to a "meaningdess scrap of paper."

that the policy of inducting youths before they finished high school would have unfavorable effects on the Nation in the coming years.

The regulations are expected to encourage many youths who have held war jobs while awaiting induction to return to school and graduate.

War Department spokesmen did not think regulations would necessitate induction large groups of older men to fill draft calls. A Selective Service spokesman sand, however, that "naturally, the more younger men who are deferred, the more you will have to depend on older men."

United States Office of Education figures show that, in normal years, only slightly more than 3 per cent of all high school graduates fail to graduate before they are 20. The average age upon graduation is 18. The office estimated that some 2,600,000 students will be in high school during the 1945-46 term.

The Army and Navy have been depending heavily upon men 18-21 to fill occupational requirements and as replacements for combat veterans and other high-point men. It is Selective Service policy to stay the induction of men over 25.

Text of Regulations

Text of the new regulations:

"Any person who entered upon a course of instruction at a high school or similar institution of learning before he became 18 years of age and who is ordered to report for induction during the time he is pursuing his course of instruction shall, upon his request, have his induction postponed (1) until his graduation from high school or similar institution of learning or (2) until he ceases to pursue continuously and satisfactorily such course of instruction, or (3) until he arrives at the age of 20 years, whichever is earlier.

"Any person who entered upon a course of instruction at a college or university before he became 18 years of age and who is orered to report for induction during a quarter or semester of such course of instruction shall, upon his request, have his induction postponed (1) until the end of such quarter or semester, or (2) until he ceases to pursue continuously and satisfactorily suchc course of instruction, which ever is earlier."

District Line Parking Lot Is Abolished

The Montgomery County Commissioners yesterday terminated the public parking lot on Wisconsin ave., and the District line, Chevy Chase, Md., a wartime measure brought about due to gasoline rationing. It will be effective November 1.

The parking lot which provided space for 200 cars was established at the outbreak of the war for the convenience of county residents who had to travel to Washington by bus and streetcar. It was leased from the Chevy Chase Land Co., to which the county paid rent equivalent to taxes.

Commissioner William Prescott, who introduced the action taken by the commissioners, said a recent check on cars parked there since gasoline rationing was lifted shows a daily average of 15 or 20 cars. Many of these are out of town cars which are parked there for several days at a time.

Radio Station WINX will broadcast the first of three interview programs featuring members of the crew of the veteran flattop of the South Pacific — the USS Enterprise—when Ed Hart interviews Comdr. William I. Martin at 6:15 p. m. today.

75 Strikers Vote Against Return To Brick Company

Seventy-five striking workers at the United Brick Corp., New York ave. and Bladensburg rd. ne., last night voted unanimously to continue on strike after turning down an offer of the company made at an afternoon meeting with the strikers and Labor Department conciliators.

The men have been on strike for a week. They seek a retroactive increase of 10 cents an hour for work performed from May 1 to August 20 on a Navy contract for 15,000 acetylene cylinders.

The company offered to meet the increase, from 70 cents to 80 cents an hour from August 20 on, but insists it is barred from paying the retroactive increase because of an unfavorable ruling by War Labor Board last July.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

WHILE MAYOR Roger T. Sermon has repeatedly urged the citizenry of Independence, Mo., to clean up the town now that it is the home of the President, there remains near the summer White House one block of pitted dirt road which mars the neighborhood appearance. It is the only dirt street in the entire vicinity of the Truman home. This one block is on West Van Horn rd., between North Delaware and North Pleasant sts., and borders the summer White House on the north.

Here is the paradoxical reason why it is unpaved:

Several years ago when WPA labor was plentiful at little cost, it was suggested the lone block of dirt be paved. For a time it looked like a sure thing. But the Wallace families (Truman's in-laws) intervened. They objected because it would increase taxes.

Opposition to improving the street came from the First Lady's mother, Mrs. D. W. Wallace, who actually owns the summer White House, 219 North Delaware st.; also from George Wallace, a brother of Mrs. Truman who lives just east of the summer White House at 605 West Van Horn rd., and is a road supervisor for Jackson County; and from Frank Wallace, 601 Van Horn rd., another brother, who is treasurer of the Wagoner-Gates Milling Co., in Independence.

The Wallace families own about one third of the property of the south side of Van Horn rd., between North Delaware and North Pleasant sts., and figured that paving the block would boost their taxes.

This summer, however, things finally changed. What with visitors coming from all over the country to see where Harry Truman used to live, the city fathers of Independence got busy.

So by the time the President of the United States, who incidentally believes in high taxes, came home on his second trip to Independence this weekend the unpaved section of West Van Horn st. had received a coat of tar.

Navy Censorships

JAPAN IS NOT the only place subject to censorship. Though the war is over, a brass-knuckled case of censorship has just occurred at the United States Naval Air Station, Banana River, Fla.

Suspected reason for the censorship is a policy put out by Navy chiefs in Washington to squelch all news stories critical of the Navy discharge system. Navy brass hats were careful not to put this censorship idea in writing, but telephoned to various Navy commanders throughout the country.

Down at the Banana River Naval Air Station, young officers and Navy men last week published their weekly paper. Banana Peelings, containing an "Inquiring Reporter" column of what Navy men think of the discharge system. It contained such quotes as these:

From C. F. Robinson, Graham, N. C., age 37: "The Navy releases men too slow. I want them to get on the ball. My wife and two kids need me a lot worse than the Navy does now that the war is over." . . . From J. E. Eberhart, Baltimore, Md.: "As to how the point system affects me, I don't know, but if I don't get out soon I'm going to butt my head on some bulkhead. I served my country and now I'm ready to go home." . . . From Ensign Frank C. Murphy, Philadelphia, with four years in the Navy: "My only regret is that I am not married. Then I would have 46 points and could be discharged quicker."

Shortly after Banana Peeling hit the streets, Commanding Officer W. J. Slattery, a regular Navy captain, cracked down. He ordered every copy of the newspaper confiscated and burned. Only a few of them survived, one of which reached this office.

No criticism of the Navy discharge system is going to be tolerated by Annapolis Graduate Captain Slattery. He intends to stay in the Navy for keeps.

GOP Conspiracy

SECRETLY BUT DILIGENTLY, a group of Republican Senators and Representatives is working with researchers for the Republican National Committee to prepare ammunition for the next election.

They are working up a huge dossier on the business activities of Elliott Roosevelt; second, his brother, Jimmy, and, finally, they plan to launch an attack on Mrs. Roosevelt. It has not been decided yet if this data will be held until next year's campaign or be released earlier.

The greatest secrecy about the whole project is being maintained with none of the active plotters willing to admit their participation. Although it is a Republican project, those engaged in it insist that their most valuable leads are coming from Democrats—particularly the Jesse Jones Texans who opposed President Roosevelt last year and are hooing that somehow, by discrediting the family most closely associated with the New Deal, they can once again take over political power.

The charges against Jimmy—and they have been heard before—are that he blackjacked numerous big firms into buying insurance through his Boston firm. The lengthy House investigation of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. a couple of years before the war resulted from the refusal of the company to insure with Jimmy, it will be charged.

The charge against Mrs. Roosevelt will be that she became a member of the board of directors of the insurance firm—Roosevelt & Sargent—when her son went into the military service, in order to prevent disclosure of his deals.

Missouri Homecoming

There is plenty of excitement in Independence, Mo., whenever President Truman decides to visit his old home town. During the July visit scores of high State officials and Midwest politicians telephoned and wired Roger T. Sermon, Mayor of Independence. A lot of them wanted their names included in the private reception the mayor gave for Truman.

The mayor, however, was both relentless and exclusive. Outside the presidential staff and 10 former officers of the old 129th Field Artillery of World War I (of which Truman was a captain), plus Independence neighbors, he said no. Several checked in at Kansas City hotels so they would be available just in case Mayor Sermon changed his mind.

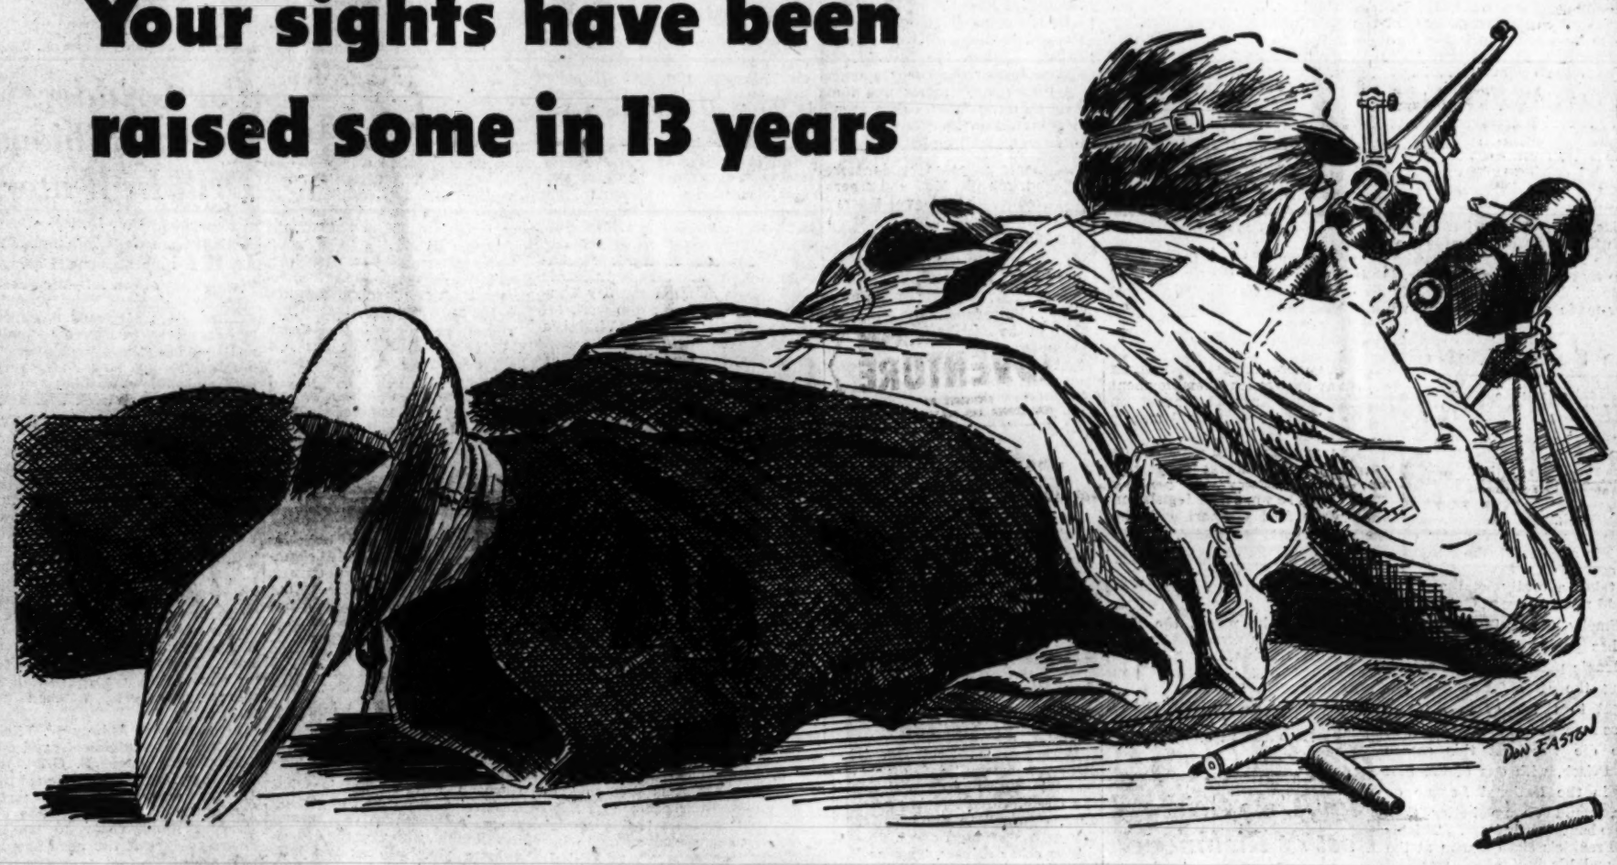
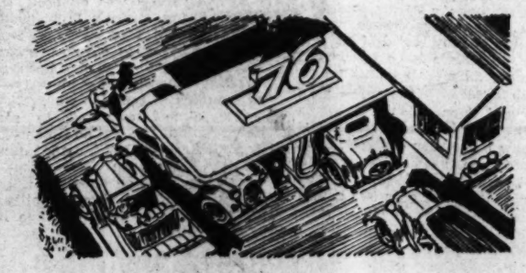
Your sights have been raised some in 13 years



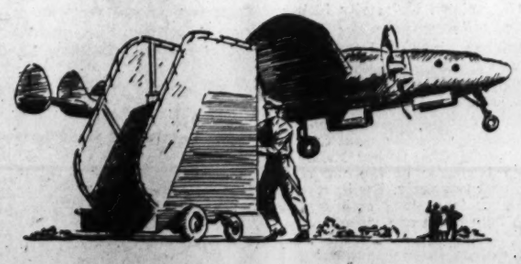


1. In 1932 Union Oil came out with a new gasoline called 76. We made quite a fuss about it. So did you. For it was demonstrably better than other gasolines on the market—so much better, in fact, that our sales went up by leaps and bounds and new dealers joined us by the hatful

2. If we were to put out that same gasoline today, only 13 years later, it would lose us customers and dealers. For by modern standards it was of a quality a good deal lower than what you're accustomed to now, and you'd recognize the difference instantly. The fact that your sights have been raised so, in only 13 years, is due largely to one thing—competition.

3. People were more than satisfied with our 1932 gasoline—in 1932. If no improvements had been introduced you'd be satisfied with it today. For you would know of nothing better to compare it with. But competition would not permit us to stand still.

4. For each of us knew that if we could put out a product a little bit better than the rest of the industry we could get more business. Consequently, even the company that was in the lead kept constantly searching for improvements. Progress from year to year was gradual—as it always is.



5. But in 13 years that total progress was considerable. Now if the oil business had been a monopoly—private or governmental—it is doubtful if this would have happened. For there simply aren't the incentives to better your product when you already control all the trade.

6. So as long as there's room for improvement in an industry, the only way to guarantee maximum progress is to have an economic system that guarantees maximum incentives. Our American system with its free competition provides these to a degree no other system has ever approached.

Nats Blow 5-0 Lead But Rally to Take Tiger Finale, 12-5, in Battle of Pitchers

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Washington must now content itself with the meager comfort of mathematical possibilities as far as the 1945 pennant is concerned. The Nats did themselves no good in the five-game series with the Tigers, but they did bounce back to win two of the last three games and escape a total black-out.

Povich

The Nats appear to be a gone gang. They must win all of their remaining five games, two with the Yankees and three with the Athletics. Therein lies their only chance to stay in the race, and even a five-game winning streak would be futile unless the Tigers go into something approaching a bottomless slump.

Perhaps the easiest set of figures to play with would be the possibility that the Nats would win their next five games. Then the Tigers would have to win 5 out of 8 to tie for the pennant, or 6 out of 8 to lock it up. It isn't a pretty picture for Washington, the prospects of the Nats winning five in a row or the Tigers losing more than three of their next eight.

It's against the Indians and Browns that the Tigers finish the season while the Nats close up shop on Sunday and sweat it out in idleness, during the final week. Of course the Nats' worries will extend no further than the end of the week if they don't win the rest of their games, and any game they lose could be the fatal one.

The Tigers' last eight games are divided evenly between Cleveland and St. Louis. Both of these clubs have been floundering about and the Tigers will bring down their own grief if they get less than an even break in those eight games, and it costs them the pennant, or a tie for it.

The Nats' first job toward clinging to even their slender chance is to beat the Yankees in New York tomorrow and Friday. There's a reasonable expectancy that they could win three in a row from the Athletics, but beating the Yankees is one of the things the Nats have not been doing of late. They lost four straight the last time they were in Yankee Stadium, and dropped three out of five in a recent series here.

Despite those three lickings by the Tigers in the five-game series here, there was much that was commendable about the Nats' play. They were in every ball game, and when it appeared that they could easily fade into a total eclipse in the third game, they reared up and licked Hal Newhouser, a guy who had beaten 'em ten straight times.

Against the spectre of Newhouser, the Nats produced a pitcher who could beat the Tigers. Roger Wolff, unperturbed by two unearned runs in the first inning, a 2-0 lead that seemed to assure Newhouser's eleventh straight over Washington, held the Tigers to five hits and shut them out in the last eight innings. Wolff, more than any other guy, kept the remnants of the Nats' pennant hopes alive.

The Nats failed to follow through in that second game of Sunday and even the series, but in defeat they still commanded the respect of both the customers and the Tigers. They went into the eighth trailing 5-0, you remember, and stirred up four runs and had both the tying and winning runs on base in the ninth when pinch-hitter Mike Kreevich grounded out, in trying to duck the final pitch.

It was an inspiring show the Nats staged yesterday, to beat the Tigers and hang in there. The club that blows a 5-0 lead late in the game rarely bounces back to win, but the Nats did. They got the winning runs off George Caster, who handcuffed 'em earlier in the series, and it was against no less than Newhouser that Case tripled with the bases full to apply the crusher.

The Nats don't figure to win the pennant or tie for it, but for a club that was picked to finish eighth with great unanimity, they did quite a job of it this season. No club that failed to win the pennant ever made a better try with what it had.

Bucs' Frisch Reported Out As Pilot; Lopez Rumored In

By Oscar Fraley

New York, Sept. 18 (U.P.).—Frankie Frisch is reported tonight to be on his way out as manager of the Pittsburgh Pirates and his successor is expected to be Alfonso Ramon Lopez, the castiron Castilian who captains the Corsairs.

It takes a pretty loud and fairly authentic whisper to travel the 370-odd miles between Gotham and the Smoky City. But this, they say, has passed the rumor stage. The Ironic part is that Frankie is getting the gate for a man he brought to the Bucs in his first year as manager.

The die was cast this season when Frisch, with one of the best clubs in the National League on paper, could do no better than argue about third place. This is Herr Frankie's sixth season at the helm and his best effort was last year when his club finished second—but 14½ games back of the Cards. This was make or break—and Frankie didn't make.

Frisch, the story goes, has trouble getting along with his players. The fiery and aggressive manager is wont to ride them in a manner which has them calling him the modern McGraw, something he himself couldn't take when he broke in under old Jawn.

Frankie stepped right off the Fordham campus, where he captained the baseball, football and basketball teams, to nail down a regular infield job with the Giants. McGraw was a clubhouse tyrant who bawled out stars and bushers alike. But Frisch gave him as good as he sent in their numerous clashes, a factor which caused McGraw to refer to Frisch as that "fresh damned Dutchman from the Bronx."

It appears that some of it rubbed off before Frankie was sent to St. Louis in a trade for Rogers Hornsby. However, the inflammable Frisch always had enough temper and it was a satisfactory ingredient through the days when he retired to manage the Gas House Gang. They were men who liked their directions without polish and thought poise had something to do with a right hook. No worry there when Frankie handed out verbal lashings.

But in Pittsburgh, it seems, it was a different story. This was a different type ball club and ball player. There have been innumerable excuses as to why the Pirates finished fourth on three occasions, fifth another time and second last year. But their collapse this year, when they were expected to be a pennant factor, indicates that somewhere somebody didn't give out. Frisch may not be the cause, but in baseball you can't boot those easy grounders or fail to hit curves and stick in the majors.

So the expectation is that the 37-year-old Lopez, who Frisch brought to Pittsburgh in 1940 when he took over, will get the nod to move into the managerial chair. Lopez is one of the most popular men on the team, has a lot of baseball savvy and is nearing the end of a long catching career.

The senor from Tampa, Fla., broke Gabby Hartnett's record of catching the greatest number of games when he passed the 1793-game mark this season. And you don't set records like that until you're reaching the end of your playing career. The odds are that next season all the receiving he'll be doing will be in catching complaints from the fans.

Knox, Ex-W. & M. Star, Gets Grid Post at Richmond

Richmond, Va., Sept. 18 (AP).—Glenn Knox, former star end of the William & Mary College football team, will assist Coach George Hope with the University of Richmond Spiders this year, the athletic department of the University announced today.

Knox, a native of Niota, Tenn., played with the Indians from 1939 until 1943 when he entered the Army. He was discharged from the service because of a bad knee, injured in football, and returned to Williamsburg as physical instructor at Mathew Whaley High School, and later joined the coaching staff of William and Mary under Coach R. N. (Rube) McCray, helping train Tribe basketball squads.

Besides playing fotball at William and Mary, Knox, who formerly attended Tennessee Weslyan, starred at Basketball and baseball. He was selected All-State and All-Conference end in 1942. In Basketball, he captained the All-Conference team and set an al-time scoring record for all the Box Six scoring 359 points in 22 games as center.

Buzfuz Wins Jerome 'Cap At Belmont

By Sid Feder

New York, Sept. 18 (AP).—The race that was supposed to settle the championship of the 3-year-old racing sons—the ancient Jerome Handicap—wound up today in a great big mud bath for all the "glamour boys."

The late-arriving Buzfuz had on the best pair of rubber boots through Belmont Park's chocolate pudding and came splashing home to stake out his own claim to the crown, while the hot horses of the current year slid along far up the track. And 'way out in California Busher, the queen, sent the horse laugh rolling across the country as she loomed larger than ever as the class of all of the year's 3-year-olds.

The Preakness winner, Polynesian, was in this field today. So was Pavot, who took the Belmont, and Pot O' Luck, who picked up the pot in the Arlington Classic, and Jeep, who putt-putted home in the Wood Memorial. With the Derby hero, Hoop Jr., on the shelf, this mile meander was supposed to be a cakewalk for one of them, and with it, the top spot among the colts who have come of age.

Small Crowd Present

But not one of them was even close, as the smallest crowd of the New York racing season—a mere 14,947 "ducks"—saw the stocky bay from the Sunshine Stable of Dan Chappel of Miami strut, his stuff.

Under a heavy ride by the 38-year-old Millington (Ill.) veteran, Tommy Luther, the $19.50-for-$2-shot took over the gooey going at the three-quarter mark and hung his nose on the wire half a length in front of another outsider, the gray Greek Warrior from the barn of William Helis of New Orleans.

Then came the gee-gees who were supposed to cut up the pot. Pavot, the betting favorite, was five lengths back in third place, after appearing to sulk in the early going. Pot O'Luck closed some ground at the end to wind up fifth, a head back of H. W. Lunger's fourth-place Alexis. Polynesian, who ran for a while in the first half, was a meek, mud-splattered ninth, 8 lengths in front of Jeep, who never untracked and wound up next to last.

With the sprinting Greek Warrior cutting out the pace, the field of 11 sizzled the 6 furlongs in 1:09 4/5, and Buzfuz was clocked in 1:37 1/5 for the seventy-sixth running of this mile. Packing 115 pounds—10 less than Pavot and 11 below Polynesian's top package, the Florida-owned mudder picked up a pay-check of $12,100—biggest bankroll for the Jerome in 54 years—and maintained his record of never finishing out of the money in the 15 times he came to he races.

Jockey Thomas In Hospital With Chest Injuries

Delaware, O., Sept. 18, (AP).—Henry Thomas, third driver injured in a five-horse spill during the Grand Circuit racing program here, returned to the hospital today with a crushed chest.

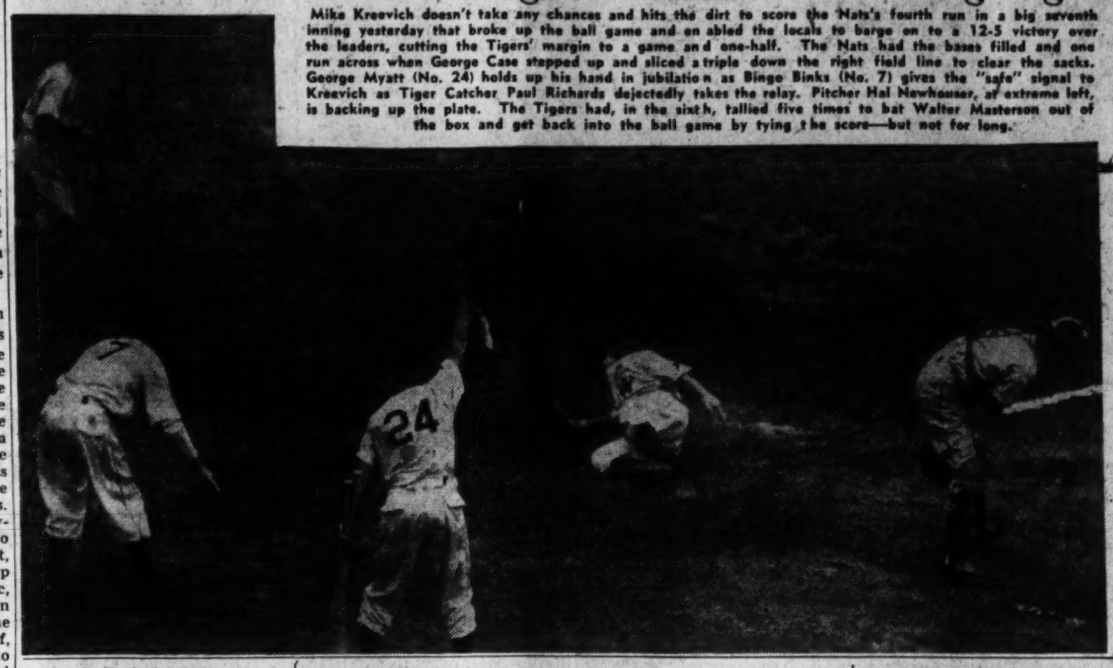
Two other drivers, Thomas Berry of Lexington, Ky., and Vic Fleming of Syracuse, N. Y., were reported in fair condition. Berry received a fractured rib, sprained back and hip, and Fleming a broken nose and severely lacerated face in the spill during the feature event yesterday.

Thomas, who was driving Billy Jane, left the hospital last night but was readmitted about noon after complaining of severe pain, his physician reported. The doctor said X-rays showed several ribs crushed on his left side.

All three drivers were expected to recover satisfactorily, the physician added.

The other driver, Russell Rose of Bloomington, Ill., and Bob Plaxico of Canton, O., were not hurt.

When the Nats Clawed Right Back at the Leading Tigers



Mike Kreevich doesn't take any chances and hits the dirt to score the Nats's fourth run in a big seventh inning yesterday that broke up the ball game and enabled the locals to barge on to a 12-5 victory over the leaders, cutting the Tigers' margin to a game and one-half. The Nats had the bases filled and one run across when George Case stepped up and sliced a triple down the right field line to clear the sacks. George Myatt (No. 24) holds up his hand in jubilation as Bingo Binks (No. 7) gives the "safe" signal to Kreevich as Tiger Catcher Paul Richards dejectedly takes the relay. Pitcher Hal Newhouser, at extreme left, is backing up the plate. The Tigers had, in the sixth, tallied five times to bat Walter Masterson out of the box and get back into the ball game by tying the score—but not for long.

Virginia Eleven Faces Cadets Without Drills

Charlottesville, Va., Sept. 18.—Conditioning of Virginia's football team is causing considerable worry to Head Coach Frank Murray, who fears the Cavaliers may not be in shape for the stiff opening game here Saturday against the Cadets of the U. S. Coast Guard Academy.

Bad weather has handicapped Virginia practice ever since workouts were started two weeks ago. This afternoon was the sixth time in twelve days that the Calalier drill was slowed down either by rain or by a waterlogged field.

Fast and sure footwork was impossible for John Duda, Charlie Ellis, Clyde Johnson and Jay Kennard, the four backs who work together in what may be Virginia's starting backfield combination against Coast Guard, as well as Joe Stanley, Bill Sinclair, Ray McNabb, "Skipper" Scott, and the other speedsters who are training as ball carrying replacements.

During Virginia's six weeks of summer drill the coaching staff gave first attention to teaching the details of the T-formation attack both as to position and team play. They left contact work and conditioning for September workouts. And now wet weather has esriously interfered with the planned program of Coach Murray and his assistants.

Coast Guard will come down from New London with a heavy and experienced team, conditioned as only a service team can be, Coach Murray told the Cavalier squad members.

He reported that against Tuft's Navy trainees the Cadets seemed overconfident, and failed to measure up to their possibilities. But their upset defeat is sure to key them up for their game here Saturday, and he fears that Virginia is not far enough advanced to be ready to face such a well-drilled rival in the season's opener.

V. M. I. Gridders Practice Indoors

Lexington, Va., Sept. 18 (AP).—For the second straight day, VMI Cadets practiced in the indoors Cavalry Riding Hall because of the wet turf of the alumni field where Emory and Henry will be met in a homecoming game Saturday.

Backfield Coach Russ Cohen reported that the Wasps, who downed Milligan College 12 to 0 last week, have two fine backs in Roth and Perry. Coach Pooley Hubert spent a good part of today's session in setting up a defense against the running and passing attack

Md., N. C., Mystery Elevens

Husky, Experienced Teams Seen in Southern Conference

Richmond, Va., Sept. 18 (AP).—Huskier, more experienced football teams is the prospect for most schools in the Southern Conference this year.

Wake Forest, Duke, Clemson, North Carolina State and William and Mary all loom as formidable opponents for anybody's eleven. South Carolina is stronger and not to be taken lightly, while North Carolina and Maryland at this stage are mystery teams.

Richmond, Virginia Military Institute and Virginia Tech will field light, inexperienced elevens which will depend on deception that probably will be facilitated by changes in the rules to permit passing from anywhere behind the scrimmage lines.

Washington and Lee, Davidson, George Washington and the Citadel have not yet resumed competition.

Deacons Loom Threat

The advance dope is that Coach D. C. (Peahead) Walker has just about everything at Wake Forest that a coach dreams about. The 1944 Deacon team is back almost intact along with some of the best freshman talent in the country—and remember the Deacons lost only one game last year, bowing to Duke's Sugar Bowl champions. They get their first test against Tennessee at Knoxville September 29.

Seven lettermen are back at Duke from those Sugar Bowl champions, including Gordon Carver, named outstanding athlete in the Carolinas a year ago, who has played three years but has another because he has been a serviceman. Two other topnotch backs are available in Cliff Haggerty and Jim Larue. Coach Eddie Cameron's chief worry is a tough schedule that includes Navy Army and Georgia Tech, plus tough conference foes—South Carolina for the opener on September 22.

Clemsan will be heavier, but with fewer reserves, but has Ralph Jenkins, All-Southern center, and Alton Cumbie, who won the Jacobs Trophy a year ago as the best blocking back in the State. The Tigers have a softer schedule of ten games and will have ample opportunity to round into shape. Chief obstacle is Georgia on September 29 after an opening game with Presbyterian a week earlier.

Howard Turner Back

Breattie Feathers, starting with a new three-year contract, has all-conference back Howard Turner and seven other letterman from a team which lost only two games in 1944 and made the best record compiled at Raleigh in 10 years.

William and Mary, after a year's layoff, finds three veterans from the 1942 conference championship eleven back in harness in Nick Forkovitch, 210-pound All-State quarterback in 1942, and Dave Bucher and Doc Holloway. Coach Rube McCray has the beef, but the Indians lack experience.

The South Carolina Gamecocks, still gathering strength as veterans return, wil use the Notre Dame system with some reliance on the T-formation. Coach Johnny McMillan, the conference's youngest coach, has some fine talent available, including the veterans Bob Sideman, 195-pound back from Charlotte, Dan Haralson, 155-pound wingback from Dadeville, and Buck Isom, who has been shifted to his old blocking post from right half.

Secret Scrimmages at N. C.

North Carolina has had several disappointing seasons—but Carl Snavely is back from an extended leave at Cornell. There has been some secret scrimmage with the Green 'Heel material and Carl may come out from the wraps with something interesting.

Lieut. Comdr. Paul Bryant, taking over the coaching at Maryland this fall, needs weight and experience in the center of the line, but has four letterman in his backfield and a not unpromising squad for his modified T-formation. All told, he has 15 letterman.

Tar Gridders Go Amphibious, Drill In Water

Annapolis, Sept. 18, (AP).—Navy's football team went amphibious today in routine scrimmage along—it could have been in!—the Severn river.

Three days of steady downpour made a morass of Farragut Field—and the bold sailors went to sea in a moat, sailing bow on into the surf and billow washing the expanse where last week a gridiron sweltered.

Undoubtedly the presence of three skilled submarine skippers and a pair of ace aviators brought the Middies safely through the practice session. Comdr. Oscar Hagberg, Navy head coach and erstwhile sub commander, stood by ready to make subterranean dives if any of his players failed to reappear after a play, and he had plenty of seasoned underseas hands on hand to keep the damp situation well in hand—Capt. C. O. Humphreys and Capt. M. D. Gilmore, director and assistant director of athletics, respectively, both submarine experts, watched the practice.

Vice Admiral Aubrey W. Fitch, Academy superintendent, and his aide, Comdr. James S. Gray, jr., aircraft carrier heroes, watched the struggle move back and forth among the atolls and islands on Farragut Field, ready to launch air-sea rescues if the need should have arisen.

Navy's varsity was opposed by Coach Frank Foster's "B" squad, but after the first play, F first string and jayvee players broke water and clambered onto beaches as living examples of democracy—all moulded of common clay.

One almost expected to see Haberg adopt the system first used by Paul Revere, O.W.I. expert during the American Revolution—hang lanterns on goalposts as guides to quarterbacks calling plays—one if by land and two if by sea.

Braves Beat Reds, 3-1, Then Lose, 6-2, End Final Series

Cincinnati, Sept. 18 (AP).—Cincinnati's Reds and Boston ended business against each other today, splitting a twin bill that saw the Braves winning the first game, 3-1, on the strength of three eleventh inning fumbles by Kermit Wahl, and the Reds victorious in the nightcap, 6-2. Only 512 fans saw the contests.

Ed Wright and young Earl Harrist, just out of the Army, hurled four-hit ball at each other in the opener and Harrist held the victors hitless in their big eleventh. Cincinnati's first hit proved their only score, a fifth inning homer by Hank Sauer—his first of three for the day. Sauer's second, a two-run blow, came in the fourth frame of the nightcap. Hhis third round-tripper sailed over the right field wall in the eighth of the second game.

First game—

Boston	000 000 100	02—3	4 2
Cincinnati	000 010 000	00—1	4 4

Wright and Masi; Harrist and Lakeman. Homer—Sauer (Cincinnati) in fifth.

Second game—

Dykes, Chisox Pilot, Becomes Grandfather

Philadelphia, Sept. 18 (U.P.).—Jimmy Dykes, voluble manager of the Chicago White Sox, became a grandfather today for the first time.

A daughter was born at Abington Memorial Hospital to Mrs. Jimmy Dykes, jr. Jimmy, jr., is serving with the Navy at Okinawa.

Athletic Renaissance:

Rev. Matthews Kane Named Athletic Director at G. U.

Georgetown University took a definite step toward restoring athletics yesterday when the Rev. Lawrence C. Gorman, S. J., university president, announced the appointment of the Rev. Matthew Kane, S. J., as athletic director.

Father Kane succeeds Father John Kehoe, S. J., who was transferred to St. Ignatius Parish, New York, following the suspension of intercollegiate athletics at Georgetown in 1942. Father Kane has been treasurer of the university the past two years. His interest in athletics is of long standing. He was both coach and athletic director of the Ateneo de Manila, Jesuit college in the Philippine Islands, from 1930-33, where his basketball teams twice won the collegiate title.

He is a native of Philadelphia and is 42. He attended St. Joseph High in that city where he won 14 letters in basketball, football, baseball and track.

Father Kane said yesterday he did not plan to resume sports until next year.

Jack Doolan, Ex-Hoya Star, Joins 'Skins

By Al Costello

Post Staff Writer

Jack Doolan, one of Georgetown University's greatest ball carriers in 1940 and '41, yesterday became a full-fledged member of the Washington Redskins, just as he said he would a month ago if his Navy discharge was approved.

When the Redskins returned to their Georgetown University Medical School training field yesterday for practice after a two-week tour of the middle-west, Doolan was there to greet them. He told Coach Dud DeGroot he had been processed for discharge and would report to Philadelphia today where he would receive his white paper tomorrow. He hopes to be back in time for Thursday afternoon's drill.

The fleet former Hoya, who used to sprint the century in 9.6 as a trackman, when he was here last month to talk turkey with the Redskin coach, weighed approximately 207 pounds, 25 pounds over the figure he tipped when running Georgetown's opponents ragged. Yesterday his appearance surprised and delighted DeGroot. Doolan had been training himself while sweating out his discharge and reported weighing only 192, a mere 10 pounds above his best figure. Although he took things easy during the drill, he still showed flashes of his old time speed.

He has been in the Navy as a lieutenant for four years, two of which were on sea duty after playing the 1942 season with Lakehurst. He served on a dirigible. DeGroot plans to install Doolan at halfback, where his speed will be most enhanced in the "T" formation, which stresses speed, deception and precision rather than power.

With the cockiness they developed after beating the Bears last week vanished by their unimpressive 7-7 tie with the Chicago Cardinals Sunday, the 'Skins buckled down yesterday in a three-hour drill that was strictly business from start to finish.

The champion Green Bay Packers are coming to town Sunday and the squad will be facing its biggest test of the prechampionship season. Green Bay whipped the College All-Stars in the All-Star game, 19-7, and lost to the clawing Philadelphia Eagles last week, 28-21. The Packers didn't use Don Hutson against the Eagles but may play against the 'Skins, which means pass defense problems.

Nats Fill Bases

Gorge Caster was working for the Tigers in the seventh when the Nats began to bust the 5-5 tie wide open. Joe Kuhel started it with a single to right, and when Travis grounded to Maier, Kuhel beat the throw to second with Travis also safe. George Binks laid a superb bunt down the third base line to fill the bases.

Rick Ferrell drove across the run that put the Nats in front, 6-5, when he grounded out on a ball that Caster deflected to Hoover with his bare hand. Then the situation went deeply strategic.

With the bases still full, the Tigers called on Newhouser and the Nats sent Vaughn in to hit for Kimble. Vaughn was purposely passed. Kreevich moved into the game as hitter for Leonard, and on his grounder to Hoover, Travis was forced at home for the second out.

All Runners Score

Newhouser's first pitch to Case was the pay-off. Case stepped far into the ball and smartly hit a curve into the vast unprotected area of dead right field, and everybody on base scampered home.

Against Zeb Eaton, the sixth Tiger pitcher, the Nats rubbed it in the eighth, with four more hits by Kuhel, Travis, Binks and Ferrell score three more runs and amass 16 hits for the day.

Roger Wolff, who moved into the game at the start of the eighth, held the Tigers hitless in the last two innings. Leonard was credited with the victory.

The Nats made short work of Trout in that first inning. Their four runs stemmed from six legitimate hits against the big right hander. The big blow was Kuhel's triple down the right field line after Case and Myatt had opened with singles. Travis later doubled, and Binks singled, Torres also singled behind a walk to Ferrell. The Nats muffed another run during the inning when Binks over-ran first base.

The Nats made it 5-0 in the third after Ferrell doubled to left. Eventually he scored when Hoover fumbled Masterson's grounder.

Masterson Then Fades

Masterson appeared to be breezing to an easy victory when he folded. Cullenbine's double and Outlaw's single put Tigers on second and third with one out in the sixth, but twice previously the Tigers had been unable to score with men on third and one out. Maier flied to Binks for the second out, and then Masterson faded.

Paul Richards drove home two Tiger runs with a double to left. Hank Greenberg hit for Overmire and doubled to center. Rookie John McHale hit for Hoover and scored Greenberg's runner with a single and put the tying run on base.

When Masterson walked Mayo on four straight pitches and threw one wide ball to Cramer, the Nats got him out of there. Pieretti came in and walked Cramer on three more pitches. York drew four more consecutive balls from Pieretti to force the tying run home and bring Dutch Leonard to the scene. When eLonard's first pitch to Cullenbine was low, it was the thirteenth consecutive ball called against Washington pitchers. On his second pitch, Leonard retired Cullenbine and walked off the field in a deep blush. It was a line drive that Travis speared.

The Doge Wins Again

Clagget Rides $7.60 Shot; He Rolls 2d

By Walter Haight
Post Staff Writer

Laurel, Md., Sept. 18.—The Centagon Stable's The Doge, partial to the Laurel track and at home in the muddy going ran off with the $5000 Kenilworth Purse here this afternoon with a crowd of 10,000 watching. The Doge, ridden by Jockey Herb Claggett, finished three lengths in advance of the Edgehill Stable's He Rolls, the favorite in the field of six going a mile and a sixteenth. A length farther back came H. C. Dressler's Some Man to be third.

The Doge made it two victories in a row over this track and three for the year. The 3-year-old, youngest member of the field, paid $7.60 and was clocked in 147 2/5.

Claggett broke The Doge first and sprinted him into a wide lead going to the backstretch where he took a rating grip and awaited developments. He Rolls, off slowly moved to second position on the backstretch. Apprentice M. Buxton tried to get He Rolls to the leader but Claggett went into a drive in the stretch and held the veteran son of Rolls Royce safe. Some Man saved ground and was an energetic third.

$39.40 Shot Wins

The day's activities started with an upset. P. Hickman's Hearth Mouse, making the second start of his career, was a galloping winner of the first event which drew 11 juveniles for a hop, skip and splash of 6 furlongs.

To the tune of a $39.40 mutuel, Jockey M. N. Gonzalez booted the son of Firethorn and Mouser home some five lengths ahead of the closest opposition. A. S. Hewitt's Diatribe was second a neck ahead of Cedar Farm's Gayward. The winner went to the front at the break and was never threatened. He hung up time of 1:15 1-5.

W. L. O'Brien's Joblots was the easiest kind of a winner in the second race, much to the delight of the favorite players. Apprentice Donny Padgett took the Jean Bart filly to the front in the opening furlong and it was all over but the $4.10 pay-off. Joblots completed a $95.40 daily double. The winner was clocked in 1:47 1-5 for the mile and 70 yards. The Springbrook Farm's Hill Fox was second, beaten four lengths. Mrs. N. J. Sakell's Saving was third.

White Easter Scores

R. L. Poston's White Easter, a minor track performer all summer, upset the favorite in the fourth race winning by some four lengths over Mrs. M. Buxton's Ask Aunt Ada in a sprint of 6 furlongs. Jockey Johnny Covalli brought the winner to the front in the stretch to catch the tiring Ask Aunt Ada. Third money went to Mrs. E. Bailey's Handwave in the field of a dozen. The winner paid $31.70 and was clocked in 114 1-5.

The third disqualification of the meeting marked the seventh race. This time the favorite players profited. J. L. Friedman's Squadro finished a head in front of Cal's Pet but the stewards reversed that order after Jockey Herb Claggett made an objection against Lee Haskell who rode Squadron. Squadron carried Cal's Pet almost to the outside fence entering the stretch. W. L. Huntley's Top Reward was third in the field of six going a mile and a furlong. The official winner paid $4.70 and the running time was 154 1-5.

Jockey Lee Haskell was also suspended 10 days by the stewards for unfair tactics.

House Passes Bill Removing Army Limits

By Mary Spargo.

The House yesterday unanimously approved legislation removing the 280,000 limitation on the size of Nation's peacetime Army and offering special inducements to men 17 and older to volunteer for service in the armed forces.

The measure was sent to the Senate, whose Military Affairs Committee is studying every phase of the demobilization program.

The bill as it passed the House would permit men who have served six months in the Army to reenlist for one year.

Other Enlistment Changes

The measure gives those who enlist in the Army a choice between two or three year hitches.

It extends provision of the GI Bill of Rights to vlounteers under this measure, included musteringout pay, 90-day furloughs and 5 cents a mile travel allowance to their homes.

The bill lowers the period of service after which a soldier may retire from 30 to 20 years.

Meanwhile Selective Service announced a new deferment policy for 'teen-age youths which will permit most high school students to graduate before they are called for induction and allow any youths who have entered college before 18 to finish current quarters or semesters if they are prforming thir studies satisfactorily.

The War Department stated yesterday that soldiers returning from overseas who are not eligible for discharge will be given 45-day furloughs instead of 30 days.

Telegrams have gone out to men now at home on their 30-day leave that the time has been extended 15 more days, the War Department said.

Repercussions from General MacArthur's announcement from Japan that only 200,000 men would be needed to keep order in the Pacific area at the end of the next six months were heard in both Houses.

Senator Kenneth Wherry (R., Nebr.) minority whep, urged the Senate Military Affairs Committee to sponsor a resolution officially ending the war and halting the draft.

A new approach to the demobilization issue was

Mary Haworth's Mail

Girl, 9, Promptly Spends Weekly Allowance, Then Steals From Mother and Blandly Lies; Now Brother, 7, Follows Suit; What's Wrong?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: This is a serious problem and may become more so in future unless we get advice. We have four children,—a daughter, 9, and three sons, ranging in ages from 7 to 4. We give them everything they want that we can afford, and each gets a weekly allowance, to save or spend, as they wish.

Jean, the girl, gets 15 cents. The others get 10 cents, five cents and three cents, respectively. Jean spends her money as soon as she gets it; then goes into my purse without permission to buy something she wants; and if I send her to the store, she spends money on herself although I tell her not to.

Girl Unmoved By Punishment

I HAVE tried all methods, but I cannot break her of taking money and things that do not belong to her. She will look you straight in the face and lie. Now she has her 7-year-old brother doing the same. I have spanked her, made her stay in her room, taken away her allowance, denied her things she wants, etc. Her father and I have told her what happens to people who steal.

As a last resort I even threatened to have a policeman speak to her if she continues to behave this way. This is the first threat that seems to frighten her, but I haven't done it yet. Do you think I should? We have given her every chance to overcome this habit, and she is very smart in school. Please help us.

W. P.

Mother Makes Every Blunder

DEAR W. P.: Your methods of dealing with Jean's serious behavior problem could hardly be worse. They amount to pillorying her as Public Enemy No. 1 with the family as audience,—a terrible blunder,—when in fact your attention should be quietly addressed to the proposition of trying to locate and correct the fundamental mistakes in parental policy which (you may be sure) give rise to her misdemeanors.

From what you say, the following is evident: 1. Jean's dishonesty is not responsible for her brother's budding behavior in kind. 2. Both are victims, rather, of parental mismanagement on practically every front of child rearing. 3. To undo the harm and keep it from spreading to the younger children, you need to revise your tactics from A to Z.

Even if one dared risk trying to lead you out of the woods on the basis of your blind man's testimony herewith, book-length writing would be required to (1) indicate the full range of your errors in judgment and (2) propose remedial measures, general or specific. Therefore, my advice is: Ask your pastor or family doctor to help you find a suitable specialist, in child psychology or family relationships, who can give you "spot" guidance from week to week until you have gained an educated grasp on constructive child management.

Foolishly Tries To Force Growth

I THINK you have been trying, rigidly, to make adults of all your children years too soon. Possibly your system of cash allowances almost from babyhood may be contributing to the demoralization of your brood. How? By imparting a fond relish for the results that money-in-fist can produce, long before their character is primed to keep the lid on covetous impulses.

The matter of allowances for young children should be guardedly approached. There is no pat formula for getting good results. Much depends on the individual. The arrangement is confusing, even bad, for some children, in which case it should be abandoned immediately, postponed to a later season,—instead of lecturing and punishing them for wrong reactions, thus creating that atmosphere of family turmoil which most often breeds childish thieving and lying.

Added Pounds Sorry Plight For One Twin

By Ida Jean Kain

Sauntering up Broadway one day, I glimpsed a couple of identical twins, as alike as two black eyed susans. So, always on the lookout for ways to prove to any skeptical, overweights that it's the food pattern that shapes the figure, I strolled along with the twins for a few blocks and got my story.

To my query, "Is it fun to be a twin?" It is. They find it almost twice as much fun as being just one girl.

"Do you always stay exactly the same weight?" I ventured.

One twin spoke up, "We always stayed the same, within a half pound, until Joan went away to school to study music one year, and got fat! She gained 15 pounds!"

"It was pretty awful," Joan admitted. "I didn't look like Jean any more. I took a size and a half larger dress.

"It spoiled everything," the first twin explained. "We couldn't switch dates or anything. It was just like having a big sister instead of a twin," she added grinning.

"Well, then what?", I prodded.

"Oh, Jean got right after me and made me reduce! Setting up exercises, no desserts and she even watched my bread and butter and would snatch it away from me! But finally I shaped up and looked like her again."

These twins are so exactly alike I couldn't tell one from the other. They liked the same sports, the same foods and as long as they eat together they stay exactly the same weight. But as soon as the one girl changed her pattern of eating, she put on 15 pounds.

The scales and the tape measure are an accurate gauge. If you were normal weight at 21, and you have put on more than five pounds, and added as much as three inches to the waist measurement, your food pattern needs trimming.

You might like to send for the "Victory Reducing Diet" and the leaflet "Measure Your Curves." Please enclose a stamped self-addressed envelope to Ida Jean Kain, Washington Post.

Town Talk—

Man-About-Town Describes Trip to Chungking; United Nations Club Sends Down New Roots

By Eva Hinton

ONE of Washington's most popular men-about-town is now writing letters home from Chungking. Maj. Pendleton Hogan, who has been in the Army since before Pearl Harbor, rented his little Georgetown house in mid-July and took off for China. Out in the "mysterious East" Pen Hogan was promoted to lieutenant colonel (no crack intended).

A recent letter describes his trip and says that in Chungking he met General Wainwright and saw the general receive the Distinguished Service Cross which had been awarded him in 1942 by General MacArthur for "extraordinary heroism." The time that elapsed between the awarding of the medal and its presentation was, of course, due to General Wainwright's imprisonment.

Colonel Hogan also saw his old friend, Col. John R. Pugh, in Chungking just after the latter was released from a Jap prison camp near Mukden. "He looks splendid," writes Colonel Hogan. "Far better than the other prisoners I've seen."

Colonel Hogan says all the released prisoners loathe the Japs, whom they all call "Nips" (and, I don't doubt, other things even more suitable). "Their treatment was bad and they have lots of stories to tell but can't tell them publicly."

SPEAKING of his 16,000-mile trip by air to his new post, Colonel Hogan says: "Arrived in Casablanca just 24 hours after leaving D. C. Stopped next in Tunis and found apple butter on the breakfast table made in Front Royal, Va. Then Tripoli, then on to Cairo over the desert. Amazingly enough, tracks left in the sand by tanks in the battles three years ago are still plainly visible.

"Four wonderful days in Cairo staying at Shepheard's Hotel. Went into the Great Pyramid and, as there are no lights, all five of us shuddered in the appalling darkness, expecting to feel a knife in the ribs at any moment.

"Had 10 days in India and then flew overBurma, and "the Hump," breathing through an oxygen mask for three hours. Finally Chungking, an enormous, gray, dirty city of birds' nest, gray-tiled bamboo houses, clinging to steep hills on a long point of land above the juncture of the muddy Yangtze and Chialing Rivers."

CHECKING up to see what the new season will have to offer in the Capital, I found the United Nations Club putting itself on a permanent basis as a meeting place for United Nations travelers and as a center for members of the United Nations stationed in Washington.

The club is working out exchange membership privileges with the well-known Cercle Inter-Alliee in Paris and with a United Nations Club in London.

British M. P. John Foster, recently General Foster, and less recently First Secretary of the British Embassy, is helping with the London arrangements. Mr. Foster is spending a few days in New York but expects to return to Washington before going back to England.

A treat in store for members of the United Nations Club and their guests is the brand new bar-lounge which will have its formal opening on Tuesday, October 2, at a party planned for 5:30 p. m.

The best part about the treat is that fascinating redhead, Evelyn Tyner, who delighted Washington music lovers when she appeared as soloist with the National Symphony Orchestra, will play the piano in the United Nations Club's new bar lounge each evening from 5:30 to 8:30 p. m. Miss Tyner will also play with her orchestra for the club's dances on Friday and Sunday nights.

Incidentally this cross-roads of United Nations travelers, the new bar-lounge, is decorated in shades of old rose and white against pale, bluish-green walls. And, not so incidentally, the club needs the loan of a grand piano worthy of Miss Tyner's artistry and very much hopes that some friend of the club may have one in storage to lend.

Mary Burton, Mr. Mountjoy Repeat Vows

Palms, white chrysanthemums and white gladioli decorated St. Mary's Catholic Church September 16 for the wedding at 9:45 of Miss Mary Anne Burton, daughter of Lieut. and Mrs. Charles Burton, Brooke, Va., and Wesley Mason Mountjoy, Widewater, Va. The Rev. J. J. Widmer performed the ceremony.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of brocaded taffeta made on princess lines, with sweetheart neckline, long fitted sleeves and a train. Her full-length veil was fastened with a bow of brocaded satin and French roses. She carried a white prayer book covered with a white orchid and bouvardia.

Miss Veronica Diskin, Haddon Heights, N. J., wore aqua faille taffeta with a matchmaking headdress. Bridesmaids were the Misses Louise Miller, Hammonton, N. J.; Edith Munsey, Washington; Nancy Goaratt, Milford, Va., and Mary Doswell, Richmond, Va.

Two of the bridesmaids wore dresses of blue marquisette, with matching headdresses and carried bouquets of rust chrysanthemums, and the others were pink marquisette with matching headdresses and carried yellow chrysanthemums.

Sergt. N. R. Mountjoy, Washington, brother of the bridegroom, was best man. Ushers were Joseph Wichowski, Andrew Wichowski, Estel Dent and Joseph Gibson.

Following a Western honeymoon the couple will reside in Washington, where the bridegroom is stationed.

Immediately following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents.

The bride's mother wore a black suit with matching accessories and an orchid corsage. Mrs. Mountjoy wore a green suit with black accessories and an orchid corsage.

The bride is a graduate of Mary Washington College of the University of Virginia and the bridegroom attended Strayer College.

Don't Expect Child's Acts To Be Static

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

Mothers look at the outstanding behavior of children in general and then hold their own hapless child to this high standard. Older mothers, forgetting all their own trials with their children, tend to make such statements as, "My Johnny never had a soiled diaper after he was a year old," or "Sally fed herself when she was 14-months-old and wouldn't even let me help her."

All of this is discouraging to a parent and leads to the plaint of Mrs. R. C. C. that I ought to be more explicit when I say, "Don't expect too much of the child." She wants to know, "What would be too much?"

One may say that a mother expects too much if she refuses to help a child feed himself just because he has learned to handle cup and spoon. She is definitely out of line if she never expects to have any soiled or wet clothes even if the child has learned what the toilet is all about.

She is expecting too much if she scolds a child from 1 to 5 for not being polite to strangers and always saying the right word at the right time, even if he knows what the right word is.

She mustn't expect tidiness though the child may be capable of feeding himself ably. She mustn't deride the child for crying. Crying is the child's easiest expression of a hundred things he can't endure when he is young.

Our leaflet "Asking Why and What For?" deals with questions a mother finds hard to answer. It may be had by sending a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Myrtle Meyer Eldred in care of this newspaper.

Mrs. R. H. Williams Rejoins Her Parents

Mrs. Robert Hugh Williams has rejoined her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Tuckerman, at Tuxeden, their home in Edgemoor, Md., after spending the summer with her father-in-law, Dr. D. J. Williams, at Bryn Mawr, his home at Dousman, Wis.

Colonel Williams, Marine Corps, who went through the Iwo Jima, Guadalcanal and other Pacific campaigns, is still on duty in the Pacific. He recently was awarded the Silver Star for gallantry in action on Iwo Jima and already holds the Navy Cross, Purple Heart and Presidential Citation.

The Gentler Sex

Back to the Home

(An Interview)

"What do you think, Senator Tweedle, will become of women war workers?

"I think the womanhood of America has made a noble contribution toward the winning of the war."

"Yes, but now that peace——"

"Just a minute. I'm getting to that. A grateful Nation will always remember their sacrifices. And now they should be allowed to return to the security and protection of the home."

"But suppose they don't want to go back to the home?"

"Every true woman longs to leave the hurly-burly of the factory and the office, for the quiet bliss of a home where she can reign a queen upon a throne, where she can have a strong man stand between her——"

"Just a minute, Senator. Isn't it a little too much to ask that the man be 'strong'?"

"As I was saying, women were made to be cherished, reverenced, protected."

"May I inquire from what they are to be protected?"

"From-er, well the evils and temptations of the world."

"I thought perhaps you meant from work."

"Women should be protected from work—that is, work in the world at large. In a personal survey I made of women in factories and offices, I have found they are tired of working and want to go home."

"But wouldn't they have to work in the home?"

"Housework isn't real work—if it's properly systematized. Anyway, there are maids to help."

"But what if the maids all wanted to go home, too?"

"As I was saying, all of the women warworkers I have talked to are eager to give up their jobs and let their husbands take care of them?"

"How many of these women had husbands?"

"Naturally, I didn't ask such personal questions. But I do know that women generally want to quit work and lean on their good men."

"But what of the women who don't have 'good men'—or even 'men?'

"As I was saying, the normal woman wants a buffer between her and the world. She wants someone to flatter her, bring her little remembrances, make life a perpetual honeymoon—"

"Excuse me, Senator, but have you in mind any legislation guaranteeing all women such a life?"

"Just get the women back in the home, and these matters will take care of themselves."

"But what if nurses, teachers, waitresses, housemaids all go home?"

"That's different."

"And what of the spinsters?"

"Let 'em get husbands. Girls should realize there is no higher calling than being the queen of a home, cherished by a loving husband who makes her every wish his law, while clustering around her feet are adoring children who reverence her every word."

"Would you mind giving your formula for rearing such children?"

"As I was saying, the woman war worker wants to go home where she can rest and relax throughout the day, where she can have an end of worry and struggle, where she will have security, adoration, love, where she will no longer have to worry about the sordid job of making a living."

"But again may I ask, what of the women who haven't such homes to go to?"

"As I was saying—just what was I saying? . . . Oh, yes, it was that . . . that . . . oh, that women had to go somewhere so we'd have enough jobs for men."

"Good! Now we're getting somewhere, Senator. How do you propose getting rid of the women?"

Mrs. Cary Langhorne, president of Bundles for America, Inc., will serve as president of the new organization, Veterans Supply Service, to supplant Bundles for America, which will close officially the end of the month. For three years the association has worked for rehabilitation aid to servicemen and their families.

Smith-Strong Nuptials Read At St. Alban's

St. Alban's Church was the scene of a lovely wedding yesterday afternoon when Miss Catherine Birney Strong, daughter of Mrs. Catherine B. Strong, Washington, and Lieut. Lyman H. Smith, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Lyman H. Smith, Naples, N. Y., were married. The 5:30 p. m. ceremony was performed by the Rev. Charles T. Warner.

Soloist at the nuptial rites was Miss Jane Davis, daughter of former Senator James J. Davis, Pennsylvania.

Dion Scott Birney gave his niece in marriage. Her gown was of heavy blush satin with a sweetheart neckline. Her long tulle veil was held in place by a tiara of heirloom lace that has been worn by many brides of the family. Her bouquet was of white roses showered with stephanotis.

Mrs. Carlton L. Saunders, sister of the bride, was matron of honor and wore a white silk jersey gown. She carried a bouquet of salmon and white gladolli. The bridesmaids, Miss Elizabeth Dawson, Mrs. Hubert James, Miss Ruth Johnson and Mrs. Robert MacDonald, wore gowns of chartreuse silk and carried spray bouquets of salmon gladioli. All of the attendants wore halos of matching flowers.

Lieut. John Fox, USNR, was best man. Ushers were Maj. Hubert James, AUS; Lieut (j. g.) Robert MacDonald, USNR; Lieut. Harry Mittwede, USNR, and Lieut. Edward York, USNR.

A reception took place at the home of the bride's grandmother, Mrs. Arthur A. Birney, after which Lieutenant and Mrs. Smith left for their wedding trip.

For the ceremony and reception Mrs. Strong, mother of the bride, wore a gown of beige lace and crepe adorned with a corsage of orchids.

The bride attended National Cathedral School and Cornell nUIversity. She is now a lieutenant, junior grade, in the Naval Reserve.
